INTRODUCTION

THE first certain mention of Shakespeare's tragedy of Hamlet is to be found in the Stationers' Register of July 26, 1602, where it is entered to James Roberts, and noted as having been recently acted by the company known as the Lord Chamberlain's servants. It is probable that it was written not long before that date. The text, as we know it, is based upon two versions, known as the Quarto of 1604 and the Folio of 1623. There are important differences in the versions, which have aroused much discussion, but which need not concern us here. There is also an earlier Quarto of 1603, with a very imperfect text.

As in the case of nearly all his plays, Shakespeare did not trouble to invent his own plot. The Hamlet story is an old Danish one. It is to be found for the first time in the work of a certain Danish historian, by name Saxo, who wrote in Latin somewhere near the beginning of the thirteenth century. In this early version the hero is known as Amleth, and he seems to have had little enough in common with Shakespeare's subtle and complex prince. Amleth, in assuming madness, crows like a cock, flaps his arms like wings, and later, when he has killed the character who corresponds to Shakespeare's Polonius, dismembers his body, boils it and flings it to the pigs. At the conclusion of the story he makes the courtiers drunk, sets fire to the palace, and kills his uncle with the sword. The story was later translated into French, and probably it was in its French version that it originally reached England. Shakespeare was not, however, even the first man to dramatise Hamlet. An earlier play, generally believed to be the work of Thomas Kyd, who wrote The Spanish Tragedy, can be traced from contemporary allusions. This, though it has been lost, seems to have been an old-fashioned, bloodthirsty "revenge" play, and we read of "ye Ghost which cried so miserably at ye Theater like an oister wife, 'Hamlet, revenge!'"

What Shakespeare in his genius did was to take the bare bones of this old bloodthirsty tale of murder and revenge and fashion from it perhaps the greatest, certainly the most famous, tragedy in our language, the lines of which have long since passed into the current stuff of the English tongue, and which is still being read, annotated and acted all over the world. Under his hand the story ceases to be merely a shocker. We are shown the tremendous and awe-inspiring spectacle of a human soul in the merciless grip of Circumstance. And we are shown more than that, for, as in all Shakespeare's full-scale tragedies—unlike those of the Greeks, who loved to picture heroic and noble persons as the sport of indiscriminating Destiny—the seeds of the tragedy are within. Hamlet is to a very great extent the victim of his own character. As he did with Othello and Macbeth, Shakespeare surrounds Hamlet with just the set of circumstance which to one of his character would prove fatal. Passionate Othello would have slain Claudius without a moment's hesitation. Subtle Hamlet would never have accepted blindly the story of Desdemona's unfaithfulness. And so with both, while we are sensible of the dark and malignant workings of Fate in the background, we feel that Fate is not striking blindly, but that each great figure is contributing to his own downfall.

INTRODUCTION

Hamlet's delay in killing Claudius, which is the cause of so many tragic events, springs from the very stuff of Hamlet's character, and becomes thus the pith and kernel of the tragedy. In fact, as Professor Dover Wilson has pointed out, if you remove Hamlet's series of soliloquies bodily there is no reason for delay in the play at all. Did Shakespeare, the poet and the actor, seize upon the old story as a suitable vehicle for a character already gloriously living in his mind, or did he, in trying to fill out the bare bones of his plot and account satisfactorily for the persistent delay, stumble, almost as it were accidentally, across the immortal conception of Hamlet?

Hamlet.

It is related that a certain countryman, visiting London, attended a famous actor's performance of Hamlet in search of an evening's entertainment. At the end of the first act he turned, bewildered, to his neighbour and inquired, "Does that young man in black come on much more?" On being told that he was, in fact, the principal character in the play, the countryman instantly arose and left the theatre.

This attitude is fortunately rare. Hamlet, I suppose, has fascinated, as well as baffled, mankind to a greater extent than any other figure in literature. Immense discussion and dissension have raged round his character. All manner of theories have been evolved and supported by elaborate and scholarly argument. Hamlet was mad before the play begins, Hamlet was a ramshackle play-acting neurotic, Hamlet was a feeble and irresolute dreamer, or an ascetic of mighty intellect, in either case constitutionally incapable of action. It has even been quaintly suggested that he was a woman disguised, in love with Horatio.

Is it, indeed, possible completely to understand Hamlet? Did Shakespeare himself really understand him, or say in his own mind that he was this or that? Probably not. Shakespeare was an actor and a poet; he was not a commentator upon his own works. Very likely as he worked, inspired, pouring beauty, breathing life into the ramshackle old story he had picked up, he identified himself more and more completely with his own imaginary character. His own thoughts, emotions and instincts went to the making of Hamlet. In consequence Hamlet is so real, so alive, that it is impossible to analyse his character completely, as it is to analyse that of our neighbours. How seldom in real life do two people agree completely about a third! To everyone, too, who reads the play, Hamlet by his very nature suggests something of himself, some hidden mood, some secret thought or weakness. It is significant that, when a few years ago Hamlet was acted in modern costume, the self-tortures of a youthful post-War prince in plus-fours were no whit less vital than those of the traditional young man in black.

Let us look at the play itself and see what it tells us. Hamlet is, if we are to believe the grave-digger, a young man of thirty years of age. Though introspective and an idealist, there is no suggestion that by nature he is either a milksop or a neurotic. On the contrary, he was respected by the people, even though he had been deprived of the throne, had good honest friends, like Horatio, and in the very last speech of the play Fortinbras speaks of him as “likely to have proved most royally.”) He was no coward—at no time does he show a lack of physical courage—nor is he cursed with any sense of his own inferiority ; indeed, with those he dislikes or mistrusts—Polonius, Osric, Rosencrantz, and Guildestern—he is distinctly imperious and caustic. What, then, is the reason of his fatal irresolution?

When the play opens Hamlet has just suffered a very severe shock. Not only has he lost a beloved father and been cheated of his inheritance by his uncle, but—worst shock of all—he has seen his mother, whom he worshipped, married with indecent haste to his treacherous and drunken uncle. And it must be remembered that in Denmark at this time to marry your brother-in-law was unlawful ; so that in Hamlet's eyes the marriage was no true marriage. In consequence, as his first soliloquy shows, he has been thrown into a state of profound melancholy and disgust with life. His ideals are shattered, his love for Ophelia soured by his discovery of woman's frailty. He cares for nothing, and even toys with the idea of suicide. In short, it is the worst possible moment at which he could be called upon to perform a desperate action.

The time is out of joint : O cursed spite,
That ever I was born to set it right !

It is noticeable that even at the moment of almost hysterical excitement which follows the revelation of the Ghost this thought strikes him and he uses these words : knowing his own nature and abnormal state of mind, he foresees his own fatal irresolution.

Two months have elapsed between the Ghost's appearance and the beginning of the second Act, and Hamlet has achieved nothing except to implant in the minds of those about him the idea of his madness which he hopes may act as a shield to anything he may do. He has done nothing practical and continues to do nothing, though the thought of the solemn duty laid upon him is never absent from his mind. He explains his inaction partly by doubts about the genuineness of the Ghost, but whether he really feels these doubts, or whether they are excuses, consciously or unconsciously invented to justify himself, we do not know. In any case his conscience is continually pricked. The Player's speech with its simulated grief leads him to upbraid himself bitterly, as though to say, "I really must do something about this revenge business."

Is it so very difficult to grasp Hamlet's state of mind? Imagine yourself faced with some acutely distasteful task which you know you must perform. You put it off, inventing for your own benefit some plausible excuse for delay, and after that it becomes increasingly easy to put it off. And yet you can never escape from the thought of the thing to be done; however much you try to distract your thoughts, it is there all the time like a grey shadow at the back of your mind. In time it begins to look as though you would never accomplish the task: through much "thinking upon the event" the difficulties seem insuperable. The thought of failure weighs upon your mind and nerves until your will becomes paralysed. You can do nothing. And yet what a relief if it were done, the grey shadow lifted ! That, surely, greatly magnified, is the process through which Hamlet goes.

He delays, and the inevitable tragedy looms nearer. And yet all the time—and this surely is perfectly consistent—though his will seems paralysed, he is capable of sudden impulsive action when roused from his brooding lethargy. The arrival of the players gives him an idea. He will prove once and for all the fact of the King's guilt. This is action of a sort anyway ; even though it is not the supreme action enjoined upon him by his father's ghost, he flatters himself that it is a step towards it. His plan succeeds and he is wrought up to a high pitch of excitement. He will take the Ghost's word for a thousand pounds. And then—almost immediately afterwards—he is brooding again, apparently incapable of action.

He has a chance to kill Claudius. Why does he not do it ? Is the idea that Claudius, being still at his prayers, will go to heaven but another excuse ? It seems so. “ Now I might do it,” he says, not “ Now I will do it.” Nor, when the Ghost presently appears to reprove him for his almost blunted purpose, does he try to justify himself. He lets his opportunity slip. And yet but a short while afterwards he actually slays Polonius, thinking that it is the King behind the arras. Excitement has once again momentarily broken down the paralysis which holds him. He acts. Alas, that his victim should have been merely the old “ rash, intruding fool ” !

Hamlet's failure to kill the King at prayer is the turning point of the play. Had he slain Claudius then, and won the ear of the people, as Laertes did later, all might have been well for everyone, save the villainous Claudius. But he lets opportunity slip.

INTRODUCTION

Thereafter in quick succession one woe treads upon another's heels.

Hamlet himself is hurriedly sent away to England, an expedition from which the King does not intend that he shall return. Upon his way he encounters Fortinbras and his army on the march. Once again, as in the case of the Player's speech, the sight of their activity awakes in him a mood of bitter self-reproach. They are ready to face death for a "fantasy and trick of fame," while he . . . Though much has happened in between, the tenor of his thoughts here is exactly the same as in his soliloquy which closes Act II. He has moved no nearer to accomplishing his purpose. Though he tells himself in a flash of vigour that henceforward his thoughts must be bloody or nothing worth, we have begun to doubt by now whether he really believes in his own determination.

Upon this characteristic note Hamlet disappears for a short time from the action, while back in Elsinore events move swiftly towards the culminating tragedy. Ophelia goes mad and is drowned ; Laertes, learning from the King that it is Hamlet who is the cause of his misfortunes, is hot for revenge. When news comes of Hamlet's escape and return, he enters with the King into a plot to compass his death.

And so to the final Act. Hamlet is back again in Denmark, to face a situation full of peril. During his absence he has shown plenty of activity ; he has skilfully contrived to upset the King's plot against his life, he has joined vigorously in a battle with the pirates. Surely now he will stick to the decision which the sight of Fortinbras' army awoke in him ? Surely now he will be swift and desperate ? But no. With regard to that one action, it seems, he cannot ~~throw off the fatal paralysis~~; perhaps, too, the atmosphere of Denmark and the court, with its associations of former failure, helps to throw him back into his old state of mind. Though dangers surround him on all sides, we find him moping and philosophising in a graveyard, as though glad of any opportunity to distract his thoughts from the supreme matter in hand. Though he gives way to a single savage outburst of rage and grief, on learning of Ophelia's death, his frenzy soon passes. In the very last scene, but a few minutes before Osric enters with the news of the proposed fencing match, the fatal indecision is still upon him. He is arguing with Horatio, or rather with himself in Horatio's presence, whether he is justified in "quitting" the King "with this arm." Indeed, by this time a kind of hopelessness seems to have settled upon him, a feeling that he himself has no longer a hand in the matter, but that Fate will have its way.

INTRODUCTION

There's a divinity [he says to Horatio] that shapes our ends,
Rough-hew them how we will.

And again a little later, "There is a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come; if it be not to come, it will be now."

So the Court enters to watch the fencing match. Hamlet dies, one of several victims of his own irresolution. And in the moment of death, when all the terrible consequences, which might have been avoided, have duly followed, he accomplishes his purpose. Ironically enough in death he is treated as a soldier and a man of action. Fortinbras gives orders that for his passage

INTRODUCTION

The soldiers' music and the rites of war
Speak loudly for him.

Thus in military fashion he is borne from our view. And we, closing the book or leaving the theatre, are left awed, pondering, like Hamlet himself, upon the dark mysteries of Destiny and the human heart, and how far these two are one and the same.

Other Characters.

Hamlet himself dominates the play so entirely that the phrase "Hamlet without the Prince of Denmark" has become proverbial as indicating an absurdity. Since the enemy against whom he is struggling is to a great extent within himself, it follows that the play contains no rival character of the stature of Iago or Lady Macbeth. All the other persons of the play are subordinated to the central figure; indeed, we watch their behaviour largely through Hamlet's eyes.

The King.

King Claudius is not one of Shakespeare's big-scale villains. Though perhaps not altogether so loathsome a creature as Hamlet thought him, he is a drunkard and a man of mean, treacherous, hypocritical and selfish nature. He murdered his brother by the meanest kind of stealth, and on every occasion his first thoughts are for his own safety. When he hears of Polonius's death, his immediate reaction is thankfulness that Polonius and not himself was concealed behind the arras. If we are to judge by Hamlet's description ("one may smile, and smile, and be a villain"), he seems to have been an oily scoundrel, clever at ingratiating himself. Evidently he achieved this with his subjects, for though they made "mows" at him while his brother was alive, they were ready to buy his miniature when he became king. He was able, too, with ease to twist Laertes round his little finger. On the other hand, to say something in his favour, he does seem to have inspired a genuine affection in his wife, and on the occasion on which Laertes raises the people and the situation looks threatening he behaves with courage. As a monarch, too, in his less convivial hours, he appears to have been not inefficient. But, on the whole, there seems little reason to disagree with Hamlet's unflattering view of him.

INTRODUCTION

The Queen.

Queen Gertrude is a mean and shallow character, though there seems no reason to suppose, as some have done, that she was privy to the murder of her first husband. The murder is never spoken of between herself and Claudius when they are alone, and she does not share his alarm at the climax of the play scene. She is not so much an evil woman as a gross, lazy and superficial one, though she seems certainly to have had affection for her son, and he for the most part treats her with respect. The knowledge that he is his brother's murderer apparently makes no difference in her feeling towards Claudius: but whether this was due to strong affection or indifference to his crime is uncertain.

Ophelia.

Ophelia wanders through the play, an innocent, pathetic figure. Even her madness is made pathetic rather than tragic—her babbling in insanity is all of flowers—and when she is drowned it happens in a charmingly pitiful manner. Shakespeare, the craftsman, of course, sought this effect deliberately, for the love motif is not the most important part of the tragedy ; he did not want a second strong tragic figure. Ophelia has been blamed for a weak nincompoop who allows herself to be drawn into the plot against Hamlet and loses her reason at the first sign of trouble, but this is surely a little harsh. She has been jealously shielded from the world by Polonius and Laertes and trusts them implicitly; she genuinely believes that she is doing what is best for Hamlet in helping to discover the cause of his madness. As for her own madness—she has lost, almost at a single stroke, the three people who alone matter to her, Polonius dead, Laertes abroad, Hamlet insane and sent to England. She is terribly alone, face to face for the first time in her sheltered life with naked tragedy ; moreover, she believes that it is she herself who is unwittingly the cause of the disasters which seem to be crowding upon those about her. There is no one to disillusion or comfort her. We need not, I think, assume that the fact that her brain gave way is a sign that it was originally weak. She was merely very young, very innocent and completely inexperienced.

INTRODUCTION

Polonius.

Polonius is drawn deliberately as a comic character, and he has come to typify with his pompousness, his long-windedness and his determination to meddle, the garrulous, self-satisfied old bore, not unknown in high places.

INTRODUCTION

Laertes.

Laertes, though inheriting his father's unfortunate tendency to hand out platitudinous advice, and though apparently fond of a gay life in Paris, is nevertheless a man of action. His behaviour after Polonius's death throws Hamlet's irresolution into strong relief. Shakespeare, incidentally, in this scene cleverly contrives to indicate how easy it would have been for Hamlet to raise the Danes against Claudius. But nevertheless—here again Shakespeare shows his supreme skill as a craftsman—our sympathies cannot even in his bereavements lie with Laertes at Hamlet's expense. Almost immediately he joins with Claudius in the foul plot against Hamlet's life. His final speech, too, in which he throws all the blame on the King, shows a mean and deceitful nature.

Horatio.

Horatio, honest, well-balanced soul, is something more than a mere foil to Hamlet. Amid all the surrounding treachery he is the one true friend that Hamlet has, and Hamlet in consequence wears his fellow-student in "his heart of heart." He is, also, the only character in the play, apart from Hamlet himself, with whom Shakespeare is in sympathy. Shakespeare himself, perhaps, like Hamlet, delighted in the company of such a man as Horatio, so unlike yet so complementary to his own nature.

The Ghost.

The Ghost is clearly intended to be an objective vision (if this is not a contradiction in terms) visible to all. It is no mere hallucination or product of Hamlet's subconscious mind. Though in these times some of the ghost scenes may seem to have about them a faintly comic flavour, in the sixteenth and seventeenth century practically everyone believed in ghosts. To an Elizabethan audience its appearance would have been impressive, even alarming. A certain amount of controversy raged, too, about the nature of ghosts, and Hamlet's doubts as to the authenticity of the message he had received may have been genuine.

INTRODUCTION

ACT I

SCENE I. Elsinore. A platform before the castle.

FRANCISCO at his post. Enter to him BERNARDO.

Ber. Who's there ?

Fran. Nay, answer me : stand, and unfold yourself.

Ber. Long live the king !

Fran. Bernardo ?

Ber. He.

Fran. You come most carefully upon your hour.

Ber. 'Tis now struck twelve ; get thee to bed, Francisco.

Fran. For this relief much thanks : 'tis bitter cold,
And I am sick at heart.

Ber. Have you had quiet guard ?

Fran. Not a mouse stirring.

Ber. Well, good night.

11

If you do meet Horatio and Marcellus,
The rivals of my watch, bid them make haste.

Fran. I think I hear them. Stand, ho ! Who's there ?

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Hor. Friends to this ground.

Mar. And liegemen to the Dane.

Fran. Give you good night.

Mar. O, farewell, honest soldier :
Who hath relieved you ?

Fran. Bernardo has my place.
Give you good night. [Exit.

Mar. Holla ! Bernardo !

Ber. Say,
What, is Horatio there ?

Hor. A piece of him. 19

Ber. Welcome, Horatio : welcome, good Marcellus.

Mar. What, has this thing appear'd again to-night ?

Ber. I have seen nothing.

Mar. Horatio says 'tis but our fantasy,
And will not let belief take hold of him
Touching this dreaded sight, twice seen of us :
Therefore I have entreated him along
With us to watch the minutes of this night ;
That if again this apparition come,
He may approve our eyes and speak to it.

Hor. Tush, tush, 'twill not appear.

Ber. Sit down awhile ;
And let us once again assail your ears, 31
That are so fortified against our story,
What we have two nights seen.

Hor. Well, sit we down,
And let us hear Bernardo speak of this.

Ber. Last night of all,
When yond same star that's westward from the pole
Had made his course to illume that part of heaven
Where now it burns, Marcellus and myself,
The bell then beating one,—

Enter Ghost.

Mar. Peace, break thee off ; look, where it comes again ! 40

Ber. In the same figure, like the king that's dead.

Mar. Thou art a scholar ; speak to it, Horatio.

Ber. Looks it not like the king? mark it, Horatio.

Hor. Most like: it harrows me with fear and wonder.

Ber. It would be spoke to.

Mar. Question it, Horatio.

Hor. What art thou that usurp'st this time of night,
Together with that fair and warlike form
In which the majesty of 'buried Denmark "
Did sometimes march? by heaven I charge thee, speak!

Mar. It is offended.

Ber. See, it stalks away! 50

Hor. Stay! speak, speak! I charge thee, speak!

[Exit Ghost.

Mar. 'Tis gone, and will not answer.

Ber. How now, Horatio! you tremble and look pale:

Is not this something more than fantasy?

What think you on't?

Hor. Before my God, I might not this believe
Without the sensible and true avouch
Of mine own eyes.

Mar. Is it not like the king?

Hor. As thou art to thyself:

Such was the very armour he had on - struggle 60
When he the ambitious Norway combated;
So frown'd he once, when, in an angry parl
He smote the sledded Polacks on the ice.

'Tis strange. the p. is exactly

Mar. Thus twice before, and jump at this dead hour,
With martial stalk hath he gone by our watch.

Hor. In what particular thought to work I know not;

But in the gross and scope of my opinion,

This bodes some strange eruption to our state.

Mar. Good now, sit down, and tell me, he that knows, ^{So has - to} 70

Why this same strict and most observant watch
So nightly toils the subjects of the land,
And why such daily cast of brazen cannon,
And foreign mart for implements of war ;
Why such impress of shipwrights, whose sore task
Does not divide the Sunday from the week ;
What might be toward, that this sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day :
Who is't that can inform me ?

Hor. That can I ;
At least, the whisper goes so. Our last king, 80
Whose image even but now appear'd to us,
Was, as you know, by Fortinbras of Norway,
~~There~~ to prick'd on by a most emulate pride,
Dared to the combat ; in which our valiant Hamlet—
For so this side of our known world esteem'd him—
Did slay this Fortinbras ; who, by a seal'd compact,
Well ratified by law and heraldry,
Did forfeit, with his life, all those his lands
Which he stood seized of, to the conqueror :
Against the which, a moiety competent 90
Was gaged by our king ; which had return'd
To the inheritance of Fortinbras,
Had he been vanquisher ; as, by the same covenant,
And carriage of the article design'd,
His fell to Hamlet. Now, sir, young Fortinbras,
Of unimproved ^{unimproved} ^{mettle} ^{mettle} hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway here and there
Shark'd up a list of lawless resolute,
For food and diet, to some enterprise
That hath a stomach in't ; which is no other— 100

As it doth well appear unto our state—
 But to recover of us, by strong hand
 And terms compulsative, those foresaid lands
 So by his father lost : and this, I take it,
Is the main motive of our preparations,
The source of this our watch and the chief head
Of this post-haste and romage in the land.

Ber. I think it be no other but e'en so :
 Well may it sort that this portentous figure
Comes armed through our watch ; so like the king
That was and is the question of these wars. 111

Hor. A mote it is to trouble the mind's eye.
 In the most high and palmy state of Rome,
A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
 The graves stood tenantless and the sheeted dead
 Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets :
 As stars with trains of fire and dew's of blood,
Disasters in the sun ; and the moist star W. N. 11. v. 11
Upon whose influence Neptune's empire stands
Was sick almost to doomsday with eclipse :
 And even the like precure of fierce events,
 As harbingers preceding still the fates,
 And prologue to the omen coming on,
 Have heaven and earth together demonstrated
 Unto our climates and countrymen.—
 But soft, behold ! lo, where it comes again !

Re-enter Ghost.

I'll cross it, though it blast me. Stay, illusion !
 If thou hast any sound, or use of voice,
 Speak to me :
 If there be any good thing to be done,
 That may to thee do ease and grace to me,
 Speak to me : 130
[Cock crows.

If thou art privy to thy country's fate,
Which, happily, foreknowing may avoid,
O, speak !

Or if thou hast uphoarded in thy life
Extorted treasure in the womb of earth,
For which, they say, you spirits oft walk in death,
Speak of it : stay, and speak ! Stop it, Marcellus.

Mar. Shall I strike it with my partisan ? 140

Hor. Do, if it will not stand.

Ber.

'Tis here !

Hor.

'Tis here !

Mar. 'Tis gone !

[Exit Ghost.

We do it wrong, being so majestical,
To offer it the show of violence ;
For it is, as the air, invulnerable,
And our vain blows malicious mockery.

Ber. It was about to speak when the cock crew.

Hor. And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons. I have heard,
The cock, that is the trumpet to the morn, 150
Doth with his lofty and shrill-sounding throat
Awake the god of day ; and, at his warning,
Whether in sea or fire, in earth or air,
The extravagant and erring spirit hies
To his confine : and of the truth herein
This present object made probation.

Mar. It faded on the crowing of the cock.
Some say that ever 'gainst that season comes Wherein our Saviour's birth is celebrated,
The bird of dawning singeth all night long : 160
And then, they say, no spirit dare stir abroad ;
The nights are wholesome ; then no planets strike,
No fairy takes, nor witch hath power to charm,
So hallow'd and so gracious is the time.

Hor. So have I heard and do in part believe it.
 But, look, the morn, in russet mantle clad,
Walks o'er the dew of yon high eastern hill :
Break we our watch up ; and by my advice,
Let us impart what we have seen to-night
Unto young Hamlet ; for, upon my life, 170
This spirit, dumb to us, will speak to him.
 Do you consent we shall acquaint him with it,
 As needful in our loves, fitting our duty ?

Mar. Let's do't, I pray ; and I this morning know
 Where we shall find him most conveniently. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. *A room of state in the castle. Enter the KING,
 QUEEN, HAMLET, POLONIUS, LAERTES, VOLTI-
 MAND, CORNELIUS, Lords, and Attendants.*

King. Though yet of Hamlet our dear brother's death

The memory be green, and that it us befitted
 To bear our hearts in grief and our whole kingdom
 To be contracted in one brow of woe,
 Yet so far hath discretion fought with nature
 That we with wisest sorrow think on him,
 Together with remembrance of ourselves.
 Therefore our sometime sister, now our queen,
 The imperial jointress to this warlike state
 Have we, as 'twere with a defeated joy,— 106
 With an auspicious and a dropping eye,
With mirth in funeral and with dirge in marriage,
 In equal scale weighing delight and dole,—
Taken to wife : nor have we herein barr'd 107
 Your better wisdoms, which have freely gone
 With this affair along. For all, our thanks.
 Now follows, that you know, young Fortinbras,

Holding a weak supposal of our worth,
 Or thinking by our late dear brother's death
 Our state to be disjoint and out of frame, 20
Collegued with the dream of his advantage,
 He hath not fail'd to pester us with message,
 Importing the surrender of those lands
Lost by his father, with all bonds of law,
To our most valiant brother. So much for him.
 Now for ourself and for this time of meeting :
 Thus much the business is : we have here writ
 To Norway, uncle of young Fortinbras,—
 Who, impotent and bed-rid, scarcely hears
 Of this his nephew's purpose,—to suppress 30
 His further gait herein ; in that the levies, How
 The lists and full proportions, are all made
 Out of his subject : and we here dispatch
 You, good Cornelius, and you, Voltimand,
 For bearers of this greeting to old Norway ;
 Giving to you no further personal power
 To business with the king, more than the scope
 Of these dilated articles allow. Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.
 Farewell, and let your haste commend your duty. 39

Cor. }
Vol. } In that and all things will we show our duty.

King. We doubt it nothing : heartily farewell.

[Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.]

And now, Laertes, what's the news with you ?
 You told us of some suit ; what is't, Laertes ?
 You cannot speak of reason to the Dane,
And lose your voice : what wouldst thou beg, Laertes,
 That shall not be my offer, not thy asking ?
 The head is not more native to the heart,
 The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
 Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.

What wouldst thou have, Laertes ?

Laer.

My dread lord,

Your leave and favour to return to France ; 51

From whence though willingly I came to Denmark,

To show my duty in your coronation, obedience

Yet now, I must confess, that duty done,

My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France

And bow them to your gracious leave and pardon.

King. Have you your father's leave ? What says
Polonius ?

Pol. He hath, my lord, wrung from me my slow leave

By laboursome petition, and at last

Upon his will I seal'd my hard consent : 60

I do beseech you, give him leave to go.

King. Take thy fair hour, Laertes ; time be thine,
And thy best graces spend it at thy will !

But now, my cousin Hamlet, and my son,—

Ham. [Aside] A little more than kin, and less than kind.

King. How is it that the clouds still hang on you ? personal invitation given to go

Ham. Not so, my lord ; I am too much i' the sun.

Queen. Good Hamlet, cast thy nighted colour off,
And let thine eye look like a friend on Denmark.

Do not for ever with thy veiled lids eyelids

Seek for thy noble father in the dust : in earth

Thou know'st 'tis common ; all that lives must die,
Passing through nature to eternity.

Ham. Ay, madam, it is common.

Queen.

If it be,

Why seems it so particular with thee ?

Ham. Seems, madam ! nay, it is ; I know not "seems."

'Tis not alone my inky cloak black robe, good mother,

HAMLET

Nor customary suits of solemn black,
Nor windy suspuration of forced breath,
No, nor the fruitful river in the eye, 80
Nor the dejected 'haviour of the visage,
Together with all forms, modes, shapes of grief,
That can denote me truly : these indeed seem,
For they are actions that a man might play :
But I have that within which passeth show ;
These but the trappings and the suits of woe.

King. 'Tis sweet and commendable in your nature,
Hamlet,

To give these mourning duties to your father :
But, you must know, your father lost a father ;
That father lost, lost his ; and the survivor bound 90
In filial obligation for some term
To do obsequious sorrow : but to persevere
In obstinate condolment is a course
Of impious stubbornness ; 'tis unmanly grief ;
It shows a will most incorrect to heaven,
A heart unfortified, a mind impatient,
An understanding simple and unschool'd :
For what we know must be, and is as common
As any the most vulgar thing to sense,
Why should we in our peevish opposition 100
Take it to heart ? Fie ! 'tis a fault to heaven,
A fault against the dead, a fault to nature,
To reason most absurd ; whose common theme
Is death of fathers, and who still hath cried,
From the first corse till he that died to-day,
" This must be so." We pray you, throw to earth
This unprevailing woe, and think of us
As of a father : for let the world take note,
You are the most immediate to our throne ;
And with no less nobility of love 110

Than that which dearest father bears his son,
 Do I impart toward you. For your intent
In going back to school in Wittenberg,
It is most retrograde to our desire :
 And we beseech you, bend you to remain
 Here, in the cheer and comfort of our eye,
 Our chiefest courtier, cousin, and our son.

Queen. Let not thy mother lose her prayers, Hamlet :
 I pray thee, stay with us ; go not to Wittenberg.

Ham. I shall in all my best obey you, madam. 120

King. Why, 'tis a loving and a fair reply :
 Be as ourself in Denmark. Madam, come ;
 This gentle and unforced accord of Hamlet
 Sits smiling to my heart : in grace whereof,
 No jocund health that Denmark drinks to-day,
 But the great cannon to the clouds shall tell,
 And the king's rouse the heavens shall bruit again,
 Re-speaking earthly thunder. Come away.

[Exeunt all but Hamlet.]

Ham. O, that this too too solid flesh would melt,
 Thaw and resolve itself into a dew ! 130
 Or that the Everlasting had not fix'd
 His canon 'gainst self-slaughter ! O God ! God !
 How weary, stale, flat and unprofitable,
 Seem to me all the uses of this world !
 Fie on 't ! ah fie ! 'tis an unweeded garden,
That grows to seed ; things rank and gross in nature
Possess it merely. That it should come to this !
 But two months dead : nay, not so much, not two :
 So excellent a king ; that was, to this,
 Hyperion to a satyr ; so loving to my mother 140
 That he might not between the winds of heaven
 Visit her face too roughly. Heaven and earth !
 Must I remember ? why, she would hang on him,

As if increase of appetite had grown
 By what it fed on : and yet, within a month
 Let me not think on't—Frailty, thy name is woman! !
 A little month, or ere those shoes were old
 With which she follow'd my poor father's body,
 Like Niobe, all tears :—why she, even she—
 O God! a beast, that wants discourse of reason, 150
 Would have mourn'd longer—married with my uncle,
 My father's brother, but no more like my father
 Than I to Hercules : within a month :
 Ere yet the salt of most unrighteous tears
 Had left the flushing in her galled eyes, any day
 She married. O, most wicked speed, to post
 With such dexterity to incestuous sheets !
 It is not nor it cannot come to good :
 But break, my heart ; for I must hold my tongue.

Enter HORATIO, MARCELLUS, and BERNARDO.

Hor. Hail to your lordship !

Ham. I am glad to see you well : 160
Horatio,—or do I forget myself.

Hor. The same, my lord, and your poor servant ever.

Ham. Sir, my good friend ; I'll change that name with you :

And what make you from Wittenberg, Horatio ?
 Marcellus ?

Mar. My good lord—

Ham. I am very glad to see you. Good even, sir.
 But what, in faith, make you from Wittenberg ?

Hor. A truant disposition, good my lord.

Ham. I would not hear your enemy say so, 170
 Nor shall you do mine ear that violence,
 To make it truster of your own report

Against yourself : I know you are no truant.
But what is your affair in Elsinore ?

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

Hor. My lord, I came to see your father's funeral.

Ham. I pray thee, do not mock me, fellow-student;
I think it was to see my mother's wedding.

Hor. Indeed, my lord, it follow'd hard upon.

Ham. Thrift, thrift, Horatio ! the funeral baked meats 180

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven

Or ever I had seen that day, Horatio !

My father !—methinks I see my father.

Hor. Where, my lord ?

Ham. In my mind's eye, Horatio.

Hor. I saw him once ; he was a goodly king.

Ham. He was a man, take him for all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.

Hor. My lord, I think I saw him yesternight.

Ham. Saw ? who ? 190

Hor. My lord, the king your father.

Ham. The king my father !

Hor. Season your admiration for a while

With an attent ear, till I may deliver,

Upon the witness of these gentlemen,

This marvel to you.

Ham. For God's love, let me hear.

Hor. Two nights together had these gentlemen,
Marcellus and Bernardo, on their watch,
In the dead vast and middle of the night,
Been thus encounter'd. A figure like your father,
Armed at point exactly, cap-a-pe, 200
Appears before them, and with solemn march
Goes slow and stately by them : thrice he walk'd

By their oppress'd and fear-surprised eyes,
 Within his truncheon's length ; whilst they, distill'd
 Almost to jelly with the act of fear,
 Stand dumb and speak not to him. This to me
 In dreadful secrecy impart they did ;
 And I with them the third night kept the watch :
 Where, as they had deliver'd, both in time,
 Form of the thing, each word made true and good, 210
 The apparition comes : I knew your father ;
 These hands are not more like.

Ham. But where was this?

Mar. Mylord, upon the platform where we watch'd.

Ham. Did you not speak to it?

Hor. My lord, I did ;

But answer made it none : yet once methought
 It lifted up it head and did address
 Itself to motion, like as it would speak ;
 But even then the morning cock crew loud,
 And at the sound it shrunk in haste away,
 And vanish'd from our sight.

Ham. 'Tis very strange. 220

Hor. As I do live, my honour'd lord, 'tis true ;
 And we did think it writ down in our duty
 To let you know of it.

Ham. Indeed, indeed, sirs, but this troubles me.
 Hold you the watch to-night ?

Mar. }
Ber. } We do, my lord.

Ham. Arm'd, say you ?

Mar. }
Ber. } Arm'd, my lord.

Ham. From top to toe ?

Mar. }
Ber. } My lord, from head to foot.

Ham. Then saw you not his face ?

Hor. O, yes, my lord ; he wore his beaver up.

Ham. What, look'd he frowningly ?

Hor. A countenance more in sorrow than in anger. 230

Ham. Pale or red ?

Hor. Nay, very pale.

Ham. And fix'd his eyes upon you?

Hor. Most constantly.

Ham. I would I had been there.

Hor. It would have much amazed you.

Ham. Very like, very like. Stay'd it long ?

Hor. While one with moderate haste might tell a hundred.

Mar. } Longer, longer.
Ber. }

Hor. Not when I saw't.

Ham. His beard was grizzled,—no ?

Hor. It was, as I have seen it in his life,
A sable silver'd. ~ who of comes to the

Ham. I will watch to-night ; 240
Perchance 'twill walk again.

Hor. I warrant it will.

Ham. If it assume my noble father's person,
I'll speak to it, though hell itself should gape
And bid me hold my peace. I pray you all,
If you have hitherto conceal'd this sight,
Let it be tenable in your silence still ;
And whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue :
I will requite your loves. So, fare you well :
Upon the platform, 'twixt eleven and twelve, 250
I'll visit you.

All. Our duty to your honour.

Ham. Your loves, as mine to you : farewell.

[Exeunt all but Hamlet.]

My father's spirit in arms ! all is not well ; !

I doubt some foul play : would the night were come !

Till then sit still, my soul : foul deeds will rise,

Though all the earth o'erwhelm them, to men's eyes.

[Exit.]

SCENE III. A room in Polonius' house. Enter

LAERTES and OPHELIA.

Laer. My necessities are embark'd : farewell :
And, sister, as the winds give benefit
And convoy is assistant, do not sleep,
But let me hear from you.

Oph. Do you doubt that ?

Laer. For Hamlet and the trifling of his favour,
Hold it a fashion, and a toy in blood,
A violet in the youth of primy nature,
Forward, not permanent, sweet, not lasting,
The perfume and suppliance of a minute ;
No more.

Oph. No more but so ?

Laer. Think it no more : no
For nature, ^{soft} crescent, does not grow alone
In thews and bulk, but, as this temple waxes,
The inward ^{soul} service of the mind and soul
Grows wide withal. Perhaps he loves you now,
And now no soil nor cautel doth besmirch
The virtue of his will : but you must fear,
His greatness weigh'd, his will is not his own ;
For he himself is subject to his birth :
He may not, as unvalued persons do,
Carve for himself ; for on his choice depends

The safety and the health of the whole state ;
 And therefore must his choice be circumscribed
 Unto the voice and yielding of that body
 Whereof he is the head. Then if he says he loves
 you,

It fits your wisdom so far to believe it
 As he in his particular act and place
 May give his saying deed ; which is no further
 Than the main voice of Denmark goes withal.
 Then weigh what loss your honour may sustain,
 If with too credent ear you list his songs, 30
 Or lose your heart, or your chaste treasure open
 To his unmaster'd importunity.

Fear it, Ophelia, fear it, my dear sister,
 And keep you in the rear of your affection,
 Out of the shot and danger of desire.
 The chariest maid is prodigal enough,
 If she unmask her beauty to the moon :

Virtue itself 'scapes not calumnious strokes :
 The canker galls the infants of the spring,
 Too oft before their buttons be disclosed, 40
 And in the morn and liquid dew of youth
Contagious blastments are most imminent.
 Be wary then ; best safety lies in fear :

Youth to itself rebels, though none else near.

Oph. I shall the effect of this good lesson keep,
 As watchman to my heart. But, good my brother,
 Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
 Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven ;
 Whiles, like a puff'd and reckless libertine,
 Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads, 50
 And recks not his own rede.

Laer. ^{h₁ 13} O, fear me not.
 I stay too long : but here my father comes.

Enter POLONIUS.

A double blessing is a double grace ;
Occasion smiles upon a second leave.

Pol. Yet here, Laertes ! aboard, aboard, for shame !
The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are stay'd for. There ; my blessing with thee !

And these few precepts in thy memory
See thou character. Give thy thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportion'd thought his act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar. Be seen 69
Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel ;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledged comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel, but being in,
Bear't that the opposed may beware of thee.
Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice ;
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgement.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy, 70
But not express'd in fancy ; rich, not gaudy ;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man, 71
And they in France of the best rank and station
Are most select and generous, chief in that.
Neither a borrower nor a lender be ;
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all : to thine own self be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man. 80
Farewell : my blessing season this in thee !

Laer. Most humbly do I take my leave, my lord.

Pol. The time invites you ; go ; your servants tend.

Laer. Farewell, Ophelia ; and remember well
What I have said to you.

Oph. 'Tis in my memory lock'd,
And you yourself shall keep the key of it.

Laer. Farewell. [Exit.

Pol. What is't, Ophelia, he hath said to you ?

Oph. So please you, something touching the Lord
Hamlet.

Pol. Marry, well bethought : 90
'Tis told me, he hath very oft of late
Given private time to you ; and you yourself
Have of your audience been most free and bounteous :
If it be so, as so 'tis put on me,
And that in way of caution, I must tell you,
You do not understand yourself so clearly
As it behoves my daughter and your honour.
What is between you ? give me up the truth.

Oph. He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders
Of his affection to me. 100

Pol. Affection ! pooh ! you speak like a green girl,
Unsifted in such perilous circumstance.
Do you believe his tenders, as you call them ?

Oph. I do not know, my lord, what I should think.

Pol. Marry, I'll teach you : think yourself a baby ;
That you have ta'en these tenders for true pay,
Which are not sterling. Tender yourself more dearly ;
Or—not to crack the wind of the poor phrase,
Running it thus—you'll tender me a fool.

Oph. My lord, he hath importuned me with love 110
In honourable fashion.

Pol. Ay, fashion you may call it ; go to, go to.

Oph. And hath given countenance to his speech, my lord,
With almost all the holy vows of heaven.

Pol. Ay, springes to catch woodcocks. I do know,
When the blood burns, how prodigal the soul
Lends the tongue vows : these blazes, daughter,
Giving more light than heat, extinct in both,
Even in their promise, as it is a-making,
You must not take for fire. From this time. 120
Be somewhat scanter of your maiden presence ;
Set your entreatments at a higher rate
Than a command to parley. For Lord Hamlet,
Believe so much in him, that he is young,
And with a larger tether may he walk
Than may be given you : in few, Ophelia,
Do not believe his vows ; for they are brokers,
Not of that dye which their investments show,
But mere implorators of unholy suits,
Breathing like sanctified and pious bawds, 130
The better to beguile. This is for all :
I would not, in plain terms, from this time forth,
Have you so slander any moment leisure,
As to give words or talk with the Lord Hamlet.
Look to't, I charge you : come your ways.
Oph. I shall obey, my lord. [Exeunt.

SCENE IV. The platform. Enter HAMLET, HORATIO, and MARCELLUS.

Ham. The air bites shrewdly ; it is very cold.

Hor. It is a nipping and an eager air.

Ham. What hour now ?

Hor. I think it lacks of twelve.

Mar. No, it is struck.

Hor. Indeed ? I heard it not : then it draws near the season

τ Wherein the spirit held his wont to walk.

[A flourish of trumpets, and ordnance shot off, within.

What does this mean, my lord ?

Ham. The king doth wake to-night and takes his rouse, Re-vo-ry

Keeps wassail, and the swaggering up-spring reels ;
And, as he drains his draughts of Rhenish down, 10
The kettle-drum and trumpet thus bray out
The triumph of his pledge.

Hor.

Is it a custom ?

Ham. Ay, marry, is't :

But to my mind, though I am native here
And to the manner born, 'tis a custom
More honour'd in the breach than the observance,
This heavy-headed revel east and west
Makes us traduced and tax'd of other nations' :
They clepe us drunkards, and with swinish phrase
Soil our addition ; and indeed it takes 20
From our achievements, though perform'd at height,
The pith and marrow of our attribute.
So, oft it chances in particular men,
That for some vicious mole of nature in them,
As, in their birth—wherein they are not guilty,
Since nature cannot choose his origin—
By the o'ergrowth of some complexion,
Oft breaking down the pales and forts of reason,
Or by some habit that too much o'er-leavens
The form of plausible manners, that these men, 30
Carrying, I say, the stamp of one defect,
Being nature's livery, or fortune's star,—
Their virtues else, be they as pure as grace,
As infinite as man may undergo,
Shall in the general censure take corruption
From that particular fault : the dram of base

HAMLET

Doth all the noble substance often dout
To his own scandal.

Hor. Look, my lord, it comes !

Enter Ghost.

Ham. Angels and ministers of grace defend us !
Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd, 40
Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts from hell,
Be thy intents wicked or charitable, Heaven
Thou comest in such a questionable shape
That I will speak to thee : I'll call thee Hamlet,
King, father, royal Dane : O, answer me !
Let me not burst in ignorance ; but tell
Why thy canonized bones, hearsed in death,
Have burst their cerements ; grave cloth why the sepulchre,
Wherein we saw thee quietly inurn'd, in the 50
Hath oped his ponderous and marble jaws,
To cast thee up again. What may this mean,
That thou, dead corse, again in complete steel
Revisit'st thus the glimpses of the moon,
Making night hideous ; and we fools of nature
So horridly to shake our disposition
With thoughts beyond the reaches of our souls ?
Say, why is this ? wherefore ? what should we do ?

[Ghost beckons Hamlet.]

Hor. It beckons you to go away with it,
As if it some impartment did desire
To you alone.

Mar. Look, with what courteous action 60
It waves you to a more removed ground :
But do not go with it.

Hor. No, by no means.

Ham. It will not speak ; then I will follow it.

Hor. Do not, my lord.

Ham. Why, what should be the fear ?
 I do not set my life at a pin's fee ;
 And for my soul, what can it do to that,
 Being a thing immortal as itself ?
 It waves me forth again : I'll follow it.

Hor. What if it tempt you toward the flood, my lord,
 Or to the dreadful summit of the cliff 70
 That beetles o'er his base into the sea,
 And there assume some other horrible form,
 Which might deprive your sovereignty of reason
 And draw you into madness ? think of it :
 The very place puts toys of desperation,
 Without more motive, into every brain
 That looks so many fathoms to the sea
 And hears it roar beneath.

Ham. It waves me still.
 Go on ; I'll follow thee.

Mar. You shall not go, my lord.

Ham. Hold off your hands. 80

Hor. Be ruled ; you shall not go.

Ham. My fate cries out,
 And makes each petty artery in this body
 As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.
 Still am I call'd. Unhand me, gentlemen.
 By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets me !
 I say, away ! Go on ; I'll follow thee.

[Exeunt Ghost and Hamlet.]

Hor. He waxes desperate with imagination.

Mar. Let's follow ; 'tis not fit thus to obey him.

Hor. Have after. To what issue will this come ?

Mar. Something is rotten in the state of Denmark. 90

Hor. Heaven will direct it.

Mar. Nay, let's follow him.

[Exeunt.]

And prey on garbage. ^{2 breath}
 But, soft ! methinks I scent the morning air ;
 Brief let me be. Sleeping within my orchard,
 My custom always of the afternoon, 60
 Upon my secure hour thy uncle stole,
 With juice of cursed hebenon in a vial, ^{ad}
 And in the porches of my ears did pour
 The leperous distilment ; whose effect
 Holds such an enmity with blood of man
 That swift as quicksilver it courses through ^{runs}
 The natural gates and alleys of the body, ^{valley}
 And with a sudden vigour it doth posset
 And curd, like eager droppings into milk,
 The thin and wholesome blood : so did it mine ; 70
 And a most instant tetter ² bark'd about,
 Most lazar-like, with vile and loathsome crust,
 All my smooth body.
 Thus was I, sleeping, by a brother's hand
 Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd :
 Cut off even in the blossoms of my sin, ^{on thy part}
 Unhousel'd, disappointed, unaneled, ²
 No reckoning made, but sent to my account
 With all my imperfections on my head :
 O, horrible ! O, horrible ! most horrible ! 80
 If thou hast nature in thee, bear it not ;
 Let not the royal bed of Denmark be
 A couch for luxury and damned incest. ²
 But, howsoever thou pursuest this act,
 Taint not thy mind, nor let thy soul contrive
 Against thy mother aught : leave her to heaven
 And to those thorns that in her bosom lodge,
 To prick and sting her. Fare thee well at once !
 The glow-worm shows the matⁿ to be near,
 And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire : 90

Adieu, adieu ! Hamlet, remember me. [Exit.

Ham. O all you host of heaven ! O earth ! what else ?

And shall I couple hell ? O, fie ! Hold, hold, my heart ;

And you, my ^{sinews}, grow not instant old,

But bear me stiffly up. Remember thee !

Ay, thou poor ghost, while memory holds a seat

In this distracted globe. Remember thee !

Yea, from the table of my memory

I'll wipe away all trivial fond records,

All saws of books, all forms, all pressures past, 100

That youth and observation copied there ;

And thy commandment all alone shall live

Within the book and volume of my brain,

Unmix'd with baser matter : yes, by heaven !

O most pernicious woman !

O villain, villain, smiling, damned villain !

My tables,—meet it is I set it down,

That one may smile, and smile, and be a villain ;

At least I'm sure it may be so in Denmark : [Writing.

So, uncle, there you are. Now to my word ; 110

It is “ Adieu, adieu ! remember me.”

I have sworn't.

Mar. } [Within] My lord, my lord,—

Mar. [Within] Lord Hamlet,—

Hor. [Within] Heaven secure him !

Ham. So be it !

Hor. [Within] Hillo, ho, ho, my lord !

Ham. Hillo, ho, ho, boy ! come, bird, come.

Enter HORATIO and MARCELLUS.

Mar. How is't, my noble lord ?

Hor. What news, my lord?

Ham. O, wonderful !

Hor. Good my lord, tell it.

Ham. No ; you'll reveal it.

Hor. Not I, my lord, by heaven.

Mar. Nor I, my lord. 120

Ham. How say you, then ; would heart of man once think it ?

But you'll be secret ?

Hor. }
Mar. } Ay, by heaven, my lord.

Ham. There's ne'er a villain dwelling in all Denmark

But he's an arrant knave.

Hor. There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave

To tell us this.

Ham. Why, right ; you are i' the right ;
And so, without more circumstance at all,
I hold it fit that we shake hands and part :
You, as your business and desire shall point you ;
For every man has business and desire, 130
Such as it is ; and for mine own poor part,
Look you, I'll go pray.

Hor. These are but wild and whirling words, my lord.

Ham. I'm sorry they offend you, heartily ;
Yes, 'faith, heartily.

Hor. There's no offence, my lord.

Ham. Yes, by Saint Patrick, but there is, Horatio,
And much offence too. Touching this vision here,
It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you :
For your desire to know what is between us,
O'ermaster't as you may. And now, good friends, 140

As you are friends, scholars and soldiers,
Give me one poor request.

Hor. What is't, my lord? we will.

Ham. Never make known what you have seen to-night.

Hor. } My lord, we will not.
Mar. }

Ham. Nay, but swear't.

Hor. In faith,

My lord, not I.

Mar. Nor I, my lord, in faith.

Ham. Upon my sword.

Mar. We have sworn, my lord, already.

Ham. Indeed, upon my sword, indeed.

Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.

Ham. Ah, ha, boy! say'st thou so? art thou there, truepenny? of fellow 150

Come on—you hear this fellow in the cellarage—
Consent to swear.

Hor. Propose the oath, my lord.

Ham. Never to speak of this that you have seen.
Swear by my sword.

Ghost. [Beneath] Swear. here and every where

Ham. Hic et ubique? then we'll shift our ground.
Come hither, gentlemen,
And lay your hands again upon my sword,
Never to speak of this that you have heard,
Swear by my sword. 160

Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.

Ham. Well said, old mole! canst work i' the earth so fast?

A worthy pioner! Once more remove, good friends.

Hor. O day and night, but this is wondrous strange!

Ham. And therefore as a stranger give it welcome.

There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio,
Than are dreamt of in your philosophy. /

But come ;

Here, as before, never, so help you mercy,
How strange or odd soe'er I bear myself, 170
As I perchance hereafter shall think meet

To put an antic disposition on,
That you, at such times seeing me, never shall,
With arms encumber'd thus, or this head-shake,
Or by pronouncing of some doubtful phrase,
As, " Well, well, we know," or " We could, an if we would,"

Or " If we list to speak," or " There be, an if they might,"

Or such ambiguous giving out, to note,
That you know aught of me : this not to do,
So grace and mercy at your most need help you, 180
Swear.

Ghost. [Beneath] Swear.

Ham. Rest, rest, perturbed spirit ! [They swear.]

So, gentlemen,

With all my love I do commend me to you :
And what so poor a man as Hamlet is
May do, to express his love and friending to you,
God willing, shall not lack. Let us go in together ;
And still your fingers on your lips, I pray
The time is out of joint : O cursed spite,
That ever I was born to set it right ! //

Nay, come, let's go together.

[Exeunt.]

ACT II

SCENE I. A room in Polonius' house. Enter
POLONIUS and REYNALDO.

Pol. Give him this money and these notes, Reynaldo.

Rey. I will, my lord.

Pol. You shall do marvellous wisely, good Reynaldo,
Before you visit him, to make inquire
Of his behaviour.

Rey. My lord, I did intend it.

Pol. Marry, well said ; very well said. Look you, sir,

Inquire me first what ^{Daners} Danskers are in Paris ;
And how, and who, what means, and where they keep,
What company, at what expense ; and finding
By this ^{re v. d. but m. a. i.} encompassment and drift of question 10
That they do know my son, come you more nearer
Than your particular demands will touch it :
Take you, as 'twere, some distant knowledge of him ;
As thus, " I know his father and his friends,
And in part him : " do you mark this, Reynaldo ?

Rey. Ay, very well, my lord.

Pol. " And in part him ; but " you may say " not well :

But if't be he I mean, he's very wild ;
Addicted so and so : " and there put on him
What forgeries you please ; marry, none so rank 20
As may dishonour him ; take heed of that ;

But, sir, such wanton, wild and usual slips
As are companions noted and most known
To youth and liberty.

Rey. As gaming, my lord.

Pol. Ay, or drinking, fencing, swearing, quarrelling.
You may go so far.

Rey. My lord, that would dishonour him.

Pol. 'Faith, no ; as you may season it in the charge.
You must not put another scandal on him,
That he is open to incontinency ; 30
That's not my meaning : but breathe his faults so quaintly

That they may seem the taints of liberty, ^{as it is}

The flash and outbreak of a fiery mind,

A savageness in unreclaimed blood,

Of general assault. ^{to wit, hallare gentle}

Rey. But, my good lord,—

Pol. Wherefore should you do this ?

Rey. Ay, my lord,
I would know that.

Pol. Marry, sir, here's my drift ;

And, I believe, it is a fetch of wit : ^{a plan of success}

You laying these slight sullies on my son,
As 'twere a thing a little soil'd i' the working, 40

Mark you,

^{Sallies}
Your party in converse, him you would sound,

Having ever seen in the prenominate crimes

The youth you breathe of guilty, be assured

He closes with you in this consequence :

" Good sir," or so, or " friend," or " gentleman,"

According to the phrase or the addition

Of man and country.

Rey. Very good, my lord.

Pol. And then, sir, does he this—he does—what was

I about to say? By the mass, I was about to say something : where did I leave? 51

Rey. At "closes in the consequence," at "friend or so," and "gentleman."

Pol. At "closes in the consequence," ay, marry ;
He closes with you thus : " I know the gentleman ;
I saw him yesterday, or t'other day,
Or then, or then ; with such, or such ; and, as you say,

There was he gaming ; there o'ertook in's rouse ;
There falling out at tennis."

See you now ; 60

Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth :

And thus do we of wisdom and of reach,

With windlasses and with assays of bias.

By indirections find directions out :

So by my former lecture and advice, 6
Shall you my son. You have me, have you not ?

Rey. My lord, I have.

Pol. God be wi' you ; fare you well.

Rey. Good my lord !

Pol. Observe his inclination in yourself. 6

Rey. I shall, my lord. 70

Pol. And let him ply his music.

Rey. Well, my lord.

Pol. Farewell ! [Exit Reynaldo.]

Enter OPHELIA

How now, Ophelia ! what's the matter?

Oph. O, my lord, my lord, I have been so affrighted!

Pol. With what, i' the name of God ?

Oph. My lord, as I was sewing in my closet,
Lord Hamlet, with his doublet all unbraced ;
No hat upon his head ; his stockings foul'd,

Ungarter'd, and down-gyved to his ankle;
 Pale as his shirt; his knees knocking each other;
 And with a look so piteous in purport
 As if he had been loosed out of hell
 To speak of horrors,—he comes before me. 80

Pol. Mad for thy love?

Oph. My lord, I do not know;
 But truly, I do fear it.

Pol. What said he?

Oph. He took me by the wrist and held me hard;
 Then goes he to the length of all his arm;
 And, with his other hand thus o'er his brow,
 He falls to such perusal of my face
 As he would draw it. Long stay'd he so;
 At last, a little shaking of mine arm 90
 And thrice his head thus waving up and down,
 He raised a sigh so piteous and profound
 As it did seem to shatter all his bulk
 And end his being: that done, he lets me go:
 And, with his head over his shoulder turn'd,
 He seem'd to find his way without his eyes;
 For out o' doors he went without their help, eyes
 And, to the last, bended their light on me.

Pol. Come, go with me: I will go seek the king.
 This is the very ecstasy of love, 100
 Whose violent property fordoes itself. destroys him
 And leads the will to desperate undertakings
 As oft as any passion under heaven
 That does afflict our natures. I am sorry.

What, have you given him any hard words of late?

Oph. No, my good lord, but, as you did command,
 I did repel his letters and denied
 His access to me. He comes to me

Pol. That hath made him mad.

I am sorry that with better heed and judgement
 I had not quoted him : I fear'd he did but trifle, 110
 And meant to wreck thee ; but, beshrew my jealousy !
By heaven, it is as proper to our age
To cast beyond ourselves in our opinions b bch
As it is common for the younger sort
To lack discretion. Come, go we to the king :
 This must be known ; which, being kept close, might move
 More grief to hide than hate to utter love. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. A room in the castle. Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and Attendants.

King. Welcome, dear Rosencrantz and Guildenstern !

Moreover that we much did long to see you,
 The need we have to use you did provoke
 Our hasty sending. Something have you heard
Of Hamlet's transformation ; so call it,
Sith nor the exterior nor the inward man
 Resembles that it was. What it should be,
More than his father's death, that thus hath put him
 So much from the understanding of himself,
 I cannot dream of : I entreat you both, 10
 That, being of so young days brought up with him,
 And sith so neighbour'd to his youth and humour,
 That you vouchsafe your rest here in our court
 Some little time : so by your companies
 To draw him on to pleasures, and to gather,
 So much as from occasion you may glean,
 Whether aught, to us unknown, afflicts him thus,
 That, open'd, lies within our remedy.

Queen. Good gentlemen, he hath much talk'd of you ;
 And sure I am two men there are not living 20
 To whom he more adheres. If it will please you
 To show us so much gentry and good will
 As to expend your time with us awhile,
 For the supply and profit of our hope,
 Your visitation shall receive such thanks
 As fits a king's remembrance.

Ros. Both your majesties
 Might, by the sovereign power you have of us,
 Put your dread pleasures more into command
 Than to entreaty.

Guil. But we both obey,
 And here give up ourselves, in the full bent. 30
 To lay our service freely at your feet,
 To be commanded.

King. Thanks, Rosencrantz and gentle Guildenstern.

Queen. Thanks, Guildenstern and gentle Rosencrantz :
 And I beseech you instantly to visit
My too much changed son. Go, some of you,
 And bring these gentlemen where Hamlet is.

Guil. Heavens make our presence and our practices
 Pleasant and helpful to him !

Queen. Ay, amen !

[Exeunt Rosencrantz, Guildenstern, and some Attendants.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. The ambassadors from Norway, my good lord,
 Are joyfully return'd. 41

King. Thou still hast been the father of good news.

Pol. Have I, my lord ? I assure my good liege,

I hold my duty, as I hold my soul,
Both to my God and to my gracious king :
And I do think, or else this brain of mine
Hunts not the trail of policy so sure
As it hath used to do, that I have found
The very cause of Hamlet's lunacy.

King. O, speak of that, that do I long to hear. 50

Pol. Give first admittance to the ambassadors ;
 My news shall be the fruit to that great feast.

King. Thyself do grace to them, and bring them in.

[Exit Polonius.]
 He tells ^{source} me, my dear ^{Queen} Gertrude, he hath found
The head and source of all your son's distemper.

Queen. I doubt it is no other but the main ;
His father's death, and our o'erhasty marriage.

King. Well, we shall sift him.

Re-enter POLONIUS, with VOLTIMAND and CORNELIUS.

Welcome, my good friends !

Say, Voltimand, what from our brother Norway ?

Volt. Most fair return of greetings and desires, 60
Upon our first, he sent out to suppress
His nephew's levies ; which to him appear'd
To be a preparation 'gainst the Polack ;
 But, better look'd into, he truly found
 It was against your highness : whereat grieved,
 That so his sickness, age and impotence
Was falsely borne in hand, sends out arrests
 On Fortinbras ; which he, in brief, obeys ;
 Receives rebuke from Norway, and in fine
 Makes vow before his uncle never more 70
 To give the assay of arms against your majesty.
 Whereon old Norway, overcome with joy,
 Gives him three thousand crowns in annual fee,
 And his commission to employ those soldiers,

So levied as before, against the Polack :
 With an entreaty, herein further shown,

[Giving a paper.]

That it might please you to give quiet pass
 Through your dominions for this enterprise,
 On such regards of safety and allowance
 As therein are set down.

King. It likes us well : 80

And at our more consider'd time we'll read,
 Answer, and think upon this business.
 Meantime we thank you for your well-took labour :
 Go to your rest ; at night we'll feast together :
 Most welcome home ! [Exeunt Voltimand and Cornelius.]

Pol. This business is well ended.

My liege, and madam, to expostulate, ~~think~~
 What majesty should be, what duty is,
 Why day is day, night night, and time is time,
 Were nothing but to waste night, day and time.
 Therefore, since brevity is the soul of wit, 90
 And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,
 I will be brief : your noble son is mad :
 Mad call it I ; for, to define true madness,
 What is't but to be nothing else but mad ?
 But let that go.

Queen. More matter, with less art.

Pol. Madam, I swear I use no art at all.
 That he is mad, 'tis true : 'tis true 'tis pity ;
 And pity 'tis 'tis true : a foolish figure ;
 But farewell it, for I will use no art.
 Mad let us grant him, then : and now remains 100
 That we find out the cause of this effect,
 Or rather say, the cause of this defect,
 For this effect defective comes by cause :
 Thus it remains, and the remainder thus.

Perpend. Consider Carefully what

I have a daughter—have while she is mine—
Who, in her duty and obedience, mark,
Hath given me this : now gather, and surmise.

[Reads.

“To the celestial and my soul’s idol, the most beautified Ophelia,”—

110

That’s an ill phrase, a vile phrase ; “beautified” is a vile phrase : but you shall hear. Thus :

[Reads.

“In her excellent white bosom, these, &c.”

Queen. Came this from Hamlet to her ?

Pol. Good madam, stay awhile : I will be faithful.

[Reads.

“Doubt thou the stars are fire :

Doubt that the sun doth move ;

Doubt truth to be a liar ;

But never doubt I love.

119

“O dear Ophelia, I am ill at these numbers ; I have not art to reckon my groans : but that I love thee best, O most best, believe it. Adieu.

“Thine evermore, most dear lady, whilst this machine is to him, HAMLET.”

This, in obedience, hath my daughter shown me,
And more above, hath his solicitings,
As they fell out by time, by means and place,
All given to mine ear.

King.

But how hath she Received his love ?

Pol.

What do you think of me ?

King. As of a man faithful and honourable.

130

Pol. I would fain prove so. But what might you think,

When I had seen this hot love on the wing—

As I perceived it, I must tell you that,

Before my daughter told me—what might you,
 Or my dear majesty your queen here, think,
 If I had play'd the desk or table-book, Remained
 Or given my heart a winking, mute and dumb,
 Or look'd upon this love with idle sight ;
 What might you think ? No, I went round to work,
 And my young mistress thus I did bespeak : 140
 “ Lord Hamlet is a prince, out of thy star ;
 This must not be : ” and then I prescripts gave her,
 That she should lock herself from his resort,
 Admit no messengers, receive no tokens,
 Which done, she took the fruits of my advice ;
 And he, repulsed—a short tale to make—
Fell into a sadness, then into a fast,
Thence to a watch, thence into a weakness,
Thence to a lightness, and, by this declension,
Into the madness wherein now he raves, 150
 And all we mourn for.

King. Do you think 'tis this ?

Queen. It may be, very likely.

Pol. Hath there been such a time—I'd fain know that—

That I have positively said “ 'Tis so,”
 When it proved otherwise ?

King. Not that I know.

Pol. [Pointing to his head and shoulder] Take this from this, if this be otherwise :

If circumstances lead me, I will find
 Where truth is hid, though it were hid indeed
 Within the centre.

King. How may we try it further ?

Pol. You know, sometimes he walks four hours together 160

Here in the lobby.

Queen. So he does indeed.

Pol. At such a time I'll loose my daughter to him :
Be you and I behind an arras then ; as if a cattle
Mark the encounter : if he love her not
And be not from his reason fall'n thereon,
Let me be no assistant for a state, I will risk my ea
But keep a farm and carters.

King. We will try it.

Queen. But look, where sadly the poor wretch comes reading.

Pol. Away, I do beseech you, both away :
I'll board him presently.

[Exeunt King, Queen, and Attendants.]

Enter HAMLET, reading.

O, give me leave : 170
How does my good Lord Hamlet ?

Ham. Well, God-a-mercy.

Pol. Do you know me, my lord ?

Ham. Excellent well ; you are a fishmonger.

Pol. Not I, my lord.

Ham. Then I would you were so honest a man.

Pol. Honest, my lord !

Ham. Ay, sir ; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

Pol. That's very true, my lord. 180

Ham. For if the sun breed maggots in a dead dog, being a god kissing carrion,—Have you a daughter ?

Pol. I have, my lord.

Ham. Let her not walk i' the sun : conception is a blessing : but not as your daughter may conceive.
Friend, look to 't.

Pol. [Aside] How say you by that ? Still harping on my daughter : yet he knew me not at first ; he said I was a fishmonger : he is far gone, far gone : and truly in my youth I suffered much extremity for love ; very near this. I'll speak to him again. What do you read, my lord ? 192

Ham. Words, words, words.

Pol. What is the matter, my lord ?

Ham. Between who ?

Pol. I mean, the matter that you read, my lord.

Ham. Slanders, sir : for the satirical rogue says here that old men have grey beards, that their faces are wrinkled, their eyes ^{weaving} ~~purging~~ thick amber and plum-tree gum and that they have a plentiful lack of wit, together with most weak hams : all which, sir, though I most powerfully and potently believe, yet I hold it not honesty to have it thus set down, for yourself, sir, should be old as I am, if like a crab you could go backward. 205

Pol. [Aside] Though this be madness, yet there is method in't. Will you walk out of the air, my lord ?

Ham. Into my grave.

Pol. Indeed, that is out o' the air. [Aside] How pregnant sometimes his replies are ! a happiness that often madness hits on, which reason and sanity could not so prosperously be delivered of. I will leave him, and suddenly contrive the means of meeting between him and my daughter.—My honourable lord, I will most humbly take my leave of you. 215

Ham. You cannot, sir, take from me any thing that I will more willingly part withal : except my life, except my life, except my life.

Pol. Fare you well, my lord.

Ham. These tedious old fools ! 220

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Pol. You go to seek the Lord Hamlet ; there he is.

Ros. [To Polonius] God save you, sir !

[Exit Polonius.]

Guil. My honoured lord !

Ros. My most dear lord !

Ham. My excellent good friends ! How dost thou, Guildenstern ? Ah, Rosencrantz ! Good lads, how do you both ?

Ros. As the indifferent children of the earth.

Guil. Happy, in that we are not over happy ;
On fortune's cap we are not the very button. 230

Ham. Nor the soles of her shoe ? victims

Ros. Neither, my lord.

Ham. What's the news ?

Ros. None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.

Ham. Then is doomsday near : but your news is not true. Let me question more in particular : what have you, my good friends, deserved at the hands of fortune, that she sends you to prison hither ?

Guil. Prison, my lord ! fortune 240

Ham. Denmark's a prison.

Ros. Then is the world one.

Ham. A goodly one ; in which there are many confines, wards and dungeons, Denmark, being one o' the worst.

Ros. We think not so, my lord.

Ham. Why, then, 'tis none to you ; for there is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so : to me it is a prison.

Ros. Why, then, your ambition makes it one ; 'tis too narrow for your mind. 251

Ham. O God, I could be bounded in a nutshell and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have had dreams. Small

Guil. Which dreams are indeed ambition, for the very substance of the ambitious is merely the shadow of a dream.

Ham. A dream itself is but a shadow.

Ros. Truly, and I hold ambition of so airy and light a quality that it is but a shadow's shadow. 260

Ham. Then are our beggars bodies, real and our monarchs and outstretched heroes the beggars' shadows. Shall we to the court? for, by my fay, I cannot reason. real

Ros. } We'll wait upon you.

Guil. }

Ham. No such matter: I will not sort you with the rest of my servants, for, to speak to you like an honest man, I am most dreadfully attended. But, in the beaten way of friendship, heat what make you at Elsinore?

Ros. To visit you, my lord; no other occasion. 270

Ham. Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks; but I thank you: and sure, dear friends, my thanks are too dear a halfpenny. Were you not sent for? Is it your own inclining? Is it a free visitation? Come, deal justly with me: come, come; nay, speak.

Guil. What should we say, my lord?

Ham. Why, any thing, but to the purpose. You were sent for; and there is a kind of confession in your looks which your modesties have not craft enough to colour: I know the good king and queen have sent for you. 282

Ros. To what end, my lord?

Ham. That you must teach me. But let me conjure you, by the rights of our fellowship, by the consonancy of our youth, by the obligation of our ever-preserved love, and by what more dear a better proposer could charge you withal, be even and direct with me, whether you were sent for, or no? advocate

Ros. [Aside to Guil.] What say you? 290

Ham. [Aside] Nay, then, I have an eye of you.—If you love me, hold not off.

Guil. My lord, we were sent for.

Ham. I will tell you why; so shall my anticipation prevent your discovery, and your secrecy to the king and queen ^{will not suffer} moul't no feather. I have of late—but wherefore I know not—lost all my mirth, forgone all custom of exercises; and indeed it goes so heavily with my disposition that this goodly frame, the earth, seems to me a sterile promontory, this most excellent canopy, the air, look you, this brave o'erhanging firmament, this majestical roof fretted with golden fire, why, it appears no other thing to me than a foul and pestilent congregation of vapours. What a piece of work is man! how noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form and ^{action} moving how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals! And yet, to me, what is this quintessence of dust? man delights not me: no, nor woman neither, though by your smiling you seem to say so. misanthrope 312

Ros. My lord, there was no such stuff in my thoughts.

Ham. Why did you laugh then, when I said “man delights not me”?

Ros. To think, my lord, if you delight not in man, what lenten entertainment the players shall receive from you : we coted them on the way ; and hither are they coming, to offer you service. 320

Ham. He that plays the king shall be welcome ; his majesty shall have tribute of me ; the adventurous knight shall use his foil and target ; ⁵¹⁴⁸the lover shall not sigh gratis ; the humorous man shall end his part in peace ; the clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickle o' the sere ; and the lady shall say her mind freely, or the blank verse shall halt for't. What players are they ?

Ros. Even those you were wont to take delight in, the tragedians of the city. 330

Ham. How chances it they travel ? their residence, both in reputation and profit, was better both ways.

Ros. I think their inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation. See the note

Ham. Do they hold the same estimation they did when I was in the city ? are they so followed ?

Ros. No, indeed, are they not.

Ham. How comes it ? do they grow rusty ? 338

Ros. Nay, their endeavour keeps in the wonted pace : but there is, sir, an ⁵¹⁴⁹adry of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question, and are most tyrannically clapped for't : these are now the fashion, and so berattle the common stages—so they call them—that many wearing rapiers are afraid of goose quills and dare scarce come thither.

Ham. What, are they children ? who maintains 'em ? how are they ⁵¹⁵⁰escoted ? Will they pursue the quality no longer than they can sing ? will they not say afterwards, if they should grow themselves to common players—as it is most like, if their means are no better—their writers do them wrong, to make them exclaim against their own succession ? 352

Ros. 'Faith, there has been much to do on both sides ; and the nation holds it no sin to tarre them to controversy : there was, for a while, no bid for argument, unless the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.

Ham. Is't possible ?

Guil. O, there has been much throwing about of brains. 360

Ham. Do the boys carry it away ? win the day

Ros. Ay, that they do, my lord ; Hercules and his load too. an allusion to it.

Ham. It is not very strange ; for mine uncle is king of Denmark, and those that would make mows at him while my father lived, give twenty, forty, fifty, an hundred ducats a-piece for his picture in little. 'Sblood, there is something in this more than natural, if philosophy could find it out.

[Flourish of trumpets within.]

Guil. There are the players. 370

Ham. Gentlemen, you are welcome to Elsinore. Your hands, come then : the appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony : let me comply with you in this garb, lest my extent to the players, which, I tell you, must show fairly outward, should more appear like entertainment than yours. You are welcome : but my uncle-father and aunt-mother are deceived.

Guil. In what, my dear lord ?

Ham. I am but mad north-north-west : when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw. 381

Re-enter POLONIUS.

Pol. Well be with you, gentlemen !

Ham. Hark you, Guildenstern ; and you too : at each ear a hearer : that great baby you see there is not yet out of his swaddling-clouts.

Ros. Happily he's the second time come to them ; for they say an old man is twice a child.

Ham. I will prophesy he comes to tell me of the players ; mark it. You say right, sir : o' Monday morning ; 'twas so indeed. 390

Pol. My lord, I have news to tell you.

Ham. My lord, I have news to tell you. When Roscius was an actor in Rome,—

Pol. The actors are come hither, my lord.

Ham. Buz, buz !

Pol. Upon mine honour,—

Ham. Then came each actor on his ass,—

Pol. The best actors in the world either for tragedy, comedy, history, pastoral, pastoral-comical, historical-pastoral, tragical-historical, tragical-comical-historical-pastoral, scene individable, or poem unlimited : Seneca cannot be too heavy, nor Plautus too light. For the law of writ and the liberty, these are the only men. for the formal type of drama

Ham. O Jephthah, judge of Israel, what a treasure hadst thou !

Pol. What a treasure had he, my lord ?

Ham. Why,

“ One fair daughter, and no more,
The which he loved passing well.” 410

Pol. [Aside] Still on my daughter.

Ham. Am I not i' the right, old Jephthah ?

Pol. If you call me Jephthah, my lord, I have a daughter that I love passing well.

Ham. Nay, that follows not.

Pol. What follows, then, my lord ?

Ham. Why,

“ As by lot, God wot,”

and then, you know,

“ It came to pass, as most like it was,”— 420
the first row of the pious chanson will show you more :
for look, where my abridgement comes.

Sanza ^{interpretation} Enter four or five Players.

You are welcome, masters ; welcome, all. I am glad to see thee well. Welcome, good friends. O, my old friend ! thy face is valanced since I saw thee last : comest thou to beard me in Denmark ? What, my young lady and mistress ! By'r lady, your ladyship is nearer to heaven than when I saw you last, by the altitude of a chopine. ^{S^u} Pray God, your voice, like a piece of uncurrent gold, be not cracked within the ring. Masters, you are all welcome. We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at any thing we see : we'll have a speech straight : come, give us a taste of your quality ; come, a passionate speech. 434

First Play. What speech, my lord ?

Ham. I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted : or, if it was, not above once ; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million ; 'twas caviare to the general : but it was—as I received it, and others, whose judgements in such matters cried in the top of mine—an excellent play, well digested in the scenes, set down with 'as much modesty as cunning. I remember, one said there were no sallets in the lines to make the matter savoury, nor no matter in the phrase that might indict the author of affection ; but called it an honest method, as wholesome as sweet, and by very much more handsome than fine. One speech in it I chiefly loved : 'twas Æneas' tale to

Dido ; and thereabout of it especially, where he speaks of Priam's slaughter : if it live in your memory, begin at this line : let me see, let me see— 451

"The rugged Pyrrhus, like the Hyrcanian beast,"— it is not so :—it begins with Pyrrhus :— Eg 4

"The rugged Pyrrhus, he whose sable arms,
Black as his purpose, did the night resemble
When he lay couched in the ominous horse,
Hath now this dread and black complexion smear'd

max of blood
With heraldry more dismal : head to foot
Now is he total gules ; horridly trick'd
With blood of fathers, mothers, daughters, sons,
Baked and impasted with the parching streets, 461
That lend a tyrannous and damned light
To their vile murders : roasted in wrath and fire,
And thus o'er-sized with coagulate gore,
With eyes like carbuncles, the hellish Pyrrhus Old grandsire Priam seeks."

So, proceed you.

a foreigner's opinion of the
Pol. 'Fore God, my lord, well spoken, with good accent and good discretion.

First Play.

"Anon he finds him
Striking too short at Greeks ; his antique sword,
Rebellious to his arm, lies where it falls, 471
Repugnant to command : unequal match'd,
Pyrrhus at Priam drives ; in rage strikes wide ;
But with the whiff and wind of his fell sword
The unnerved father falls. Then senseless Ilium
Seeming to feel this blow, with flaming top pn
Stoops to his base, and with a hideous crash
Takes prisoner Pyrrhus' ear : for, lo ! his sword,
Which was declining on the milky head

Of reverend Priam, seem'd i' the air to stick : 480
 So, as a painted tyrant, Pyrrhus stood,
 And like a neutral to his will and matter,
 Did nothing.

But, as we often see, against some storm,
 A silence in the heavens, the rack stand still,
 The bold winds speechless and the orb below
 As hush as death, anon the dreadful thunder
Doth rend the region, so, after Pyrrhus' pause,
 Aroused vengeance sets him new a-work ;
 And never did the Cyclops' hammers fall 490
 On Mars's armour forged for proof eterne
 With less remorse than Pyrrhus' bleeding sword
 Now falls on Priam.

Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune ! All you gods,
 In general synod, take away her power ;
 Break all the spokes and fellies from her wheel,
 And bowl the round nave down the hill of heaven,
 As low as to the fiends !

Pol. This is too long. Hub of the Wheel 499

Ham. It shall to the barber's with your beard.
 Prithee, say on : he's for a jig or a tale of bawdry, or he sleeps : say on : come to Hecuba.

First Play. " But who, O, who had seen the mobled
 queen— "

Ham. " The mobled queen ? " a quick dance

Pol. That's good ; " mobled queen " is good.

First Play. " Run barefoot up and down, threatening the flames flaming hairs

With bisson rheum ; a clout upon that head
 Where late the diadem stood, and for a robe,
 About her lank and all o'er-teemed loins, exhaust 510
 A blanket, in the alarm of fear caught up ;
 Who this had seen, with tongue in venom steep'd,

'Gainst Fortune's state would treason have pronounced :

But if the gods themselves did see her then
 When she saw Pyrrhus make malicious sport
 In mincing with his sword her husband's limbs,
 The instant burst of clamour that she made,
 Unless things mortal move them not at all,
 Would have made milch the burning eyes of heaven, ^{poly} ~~would have drawn tears from~~
 And passion in the gods." ^{Eyes of heaven} 520

Pol. Look, whether he has not turned his colour and has tears in's eyes. Pray you, no more.

Ham. 'Tis well ; I'll have thee speak out the rest soon. Good my lord, will you see the players well bestowed ? Do you hear, let them be well used ; for they are the abstracts and brief chronicles of the time :
 after your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live.

Pol. My lord, I will use them according to their desert. 530

Ham. God's bodykins, man, much better : use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping ? Use them after your own honour and dignity : the less they deserve, the more merit is in your bounty. Take them in.

Pol. Come, sirs.

Ham. Follow him, friends : we'll hear a play tomorrow. [Exit Polonius with all the Players but the First.] Dost thou hear me, old friend ; can you play the Murder of Gonzago ? 540

First Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. We'll ha't to-morrow night. You could, for a need, study a speech of some dozen or sixteen lines, which I would set down and insert in't, could you not ?

First Play. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Very well. Follow that lord ; and look you mock him not. [Exit First Player.] My good friends, I'll leave you till night : you are welcome to Elsinore.

Ros. Good my lord !

549

Ham. Ay, so, God be wi' ye ; [Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.] Now I am alone.

O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I !

Is it not monstrous that this player here,

But in a fiction, in a dream of passion,

Could force his soul so to his own conceit

That from her working all his visage wann'd, ^{green}

Tears in his eyes, distraction in's aspect,

A broken voice, and his whole function suiting

With forms to his conceit ? and all for nothing !

For Hecuba ! ^{He being very much felt with it}

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, ^{alibi} Hamlet 560,

That he should weep for her ? What would he do,

Had he the motive and the cue for passion

That I have ? He would drown the stage with tears

And cleave ^{new} the general ear with horrid speech,

Make mad the guilty and appal the free,

Confound the ignorant, and amaze indeed

The very faculties of eyes and ears.

Yet I,

A dull and muddy-mettled rascal, ^{peak, fall}

Like John-a-dreams, unpregnant of my cause, 570

And can say nothing ; no, not for a king,

Upon whose property and most dear life

A damn'd defeat was made. Am I a coward ?

Who calls me villain ? breaks my pate across ?

Plucks off my beard, and blows it in my face ?

Tweaks me by the nose ? gives me the lie i' the throat,

As deep as to the lungs ? who does me this ?

Ha !

'Sounds, I should take it : for it cannot be
But I am pigeon-liver'd and lack gall ang 580
To make oppression bitter, or ere this
I should have fatted all the region kites
With this slave's offal : bloody, bawdy villain !
Remorseless, treacherous, lecherous, kindless villain !
'O, vengeance ! with a flourish

Why, what an ass am I ! This is most brave,
That I, the son of a dear father murder'd,
Prompted to my revenge by heaven and hell,
Must, like a whore, unpack my heart with words,
And fall a-cursing, like a very drab, fresh hole 590
A scullion !

Fie upon't ! foh ! About, my brain ! I have heard
That guilty creatures sitting at a play
Have by the very cunning of the scene
Been struck so to the soul that presently
They have proclaim'd their malefactions sin death
For murder, though it have no tongue, will speak
With most miraculous organ. I'll have these players
Play something like the murder of my father
Before mine uncle : I'll observe his looks ; 600

I'll tent him to the quick : if he but blench,
I know my course. The spirit that I have seen
May be the devil : and the devil hath power
To assume a pleasing shape ; yea, and perhaps wh
Out of my weakness and my melancholy,
As he is very potent with such spirits,
Abuses me to damn me : I'll have grounds
More relative than this : the play's the thing
Wherein I'll catch the conscience of the king. [Exit.

ACT III

SCENE I. A room in the castle. Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. And can you, by no drift of circumstance,
Get from him why he puts on this confusion,
Grating so harshly all his days of quiet
With turbulent and dangerous lunacy?

Ros. He does confess he feels himself distracted :
But from what cause he will by no means speak.

Guil. Nor do we find him forward to be sounded,
But, with a crafty madness, keeps aloof,
When we would bring him on to some confession
Of his true state.

Queen. Did he receive you well? 10

Ros. Most like a gentleman.

Guil. But with much forcing of his disposition.

Ros. Niggard of question ; but, of our demands,
Most free in his reply.

Queen. Did you assay him 20
To any pastime?

Ros. Madam, it so fell out, that certain players
We o'er-raught on the way : of these we told him ;
And there did seem in him a kind of joy
To hear of it : they are about the court,
And, as I think, they have already order 20
This night to play before him.

Pol. 'Tis most true :
And he beseech'd me to entreat your majesties
To hear and see the matter.

King. With all my heart ; and it doth much content me
To hear him so inclined.

Good gentlemen, give him a further edge, egg him
And drive his purpose on to these delights.

Ros. We shall, my lord.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

King. ^{precisely} Sweet Gertrude, leave us too ;
For we have ^{precisely} closely sent for Hamlet hither,
That he, as 'twere by accident, may here 30
Affront Ophelia :
Her father and myself, lawful espials, spies
Will so bestow ourselves that, seeing, unseen,
We may of their encounter frankly judge,
And gather by him, as he is behaved,
If't be the affliction of his love or no
That thus he suffers for.

Queen. I shall obey you.
And for your part, Ophelia, I do wish
That your good beauties be the happy cause
Of Hamlet's wildness : so shall I hope your virtues 40
Will bring him to his wonted way again,
To both your honours. would

Oph. Madam, I wish it may. [Exit Queen.]
Pol. Ophelia, walk you here. Gracious, so please
you,

We will bestow ourselves. [To Ophelia.] Read on this book ;

That show of such an exercise may colour
Your loneliness. We are oft to blame in this,—
'Tis too much proved—that with devotion's visage

And pious action we do sugar o'er
The devil himself.

King. [Aside.] O, 'tis too true ! 49

How smart a lash that speech doth give my conscience!
The ^{prostitute} harlot's cheek, beautified with plastering art,
Is not more ugly to the thing that helps it
Than is my deed to my most painted word :
O heavy burthen !

Pol. I hear him coming : let's withdraw, my lord.
[Exeunt King and Polonius.]

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. To be, or ^{to live or to commit suicide} not to be : that is the question :
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune,
Or to take arms against a sea of troubles,
And by opposing end them ? To die : to sleep ; 60
No more ; and by a sleep to say we end
The heart-ache and the thousand natural shocks
That flesh is heir to, 'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wish'd. To die, to sleep ;
To sleep : perchance to dream : ay, there's the rub
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause : there's the respect Respect = c
That makes calamity of so long life ; 69
For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
The oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contumely,
The pangs of despised love, the law's delay, ✓
The insolence of office and the spurns
That patient merit of the unworthy takes,
When he himself might his quietus make
With a bare bodkin ? who would fardels bear,
To grunt and sweat under a weary life,

But that the dread of something after death,
The undiscover'd country from whose bourn-
No traveller returns, puzzles the will 80
 And makes us rather bear those ills we have Than fly to others that we know not of?
Thus conscience does make cowards of us all ;
 And thus the native hue of resolution anxiety
 Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought,
 And enterprises of great pitch and moment big as
 With this regard their currents turn awry, mom
 And lose the name of action.—Soft you now !
The fair Ophelia ! Nymph, in thy orisons prayer
Be all my sins remember'd. 7th A

Oph. Good my lord, 90

How does your honour for this many a day? 9th E

Ham. I humbly thank you ; well, well, well.

Oph. My lord, I have remembrances of yours, &
 That I have longed long to re-deliver ;
 I pray you, now receive them. α

Ham. No, not I ;

I never gave you aught.

Oph. My honour'd lord, you know right well you did ;

And, with them, words of so sweet breath composed
 As made the things more rich : their perfume lost,
 Take these again ; for to the noble mind 100
Rich gifts wax poor when givers prove unkind.
 There, my lord.

Ham. Ha, ha ! are you honest ?

Oph. My lord ?

Ham. Are you fair ?

Oph. What means your lordship ?

Ham. That if you be honest and fair, your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty.

Oph. Could beauty, my lord, have better commerce than with honesty? 110

Ham. Ay, truly; for the power of beauty will sooner transform honesty from what it is to a bawd than the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness: this was sometime a paradox, but now the time gives it proof. I did love you once.

Oph. Indeed, my lord, you made me believe so.

Ham. You should not have believed me; for virtue cannot so inoculate our old stock but we shall relish of it: I loved you not.

Oph. I was the more deceived. 120

Ham. Get thee to a nunnery: why wouldst thou be a breeder of sinners? I am myself indifferent honest; but yet I could accuse me of such things that it were better my mother had not borne me: I am very proud, revengeful, ambitious, with more offences at my beck than I have thoughts to put them in, imagination to give them shape, or time to act them in. What should such fellows as I do crawling between earth and heaven? We are arrant knaves, all; believe none of us. Go thy ways to a nunnery. Where's your father? 131

Oph. At home, my lord.

Ham. Let the doors be shut upon him, that he may play the fool no where but in's own house. Farewell.

Oph. O, help him, you sweet heavens!

Ham. If thou dost marry, I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry: be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny. Get thee to a nunnery, go: farewell. Or, if thou wilt needs marry, marry a fool; for wise men know well enough what monsters you make of them. To a nunnery, go, and quickly too. Farewell. 142

Oph. O heavenly powers, restore him !

Ham. I have heard of your paintings too, well enough ; God has given you one face, and you make yourselves another : you jig, you amble, and you lisp, and nick-name God's creatures, and make your wantonness your ignorance. Go to, I'll no more on't ; it hath made me mad. (I say, we will have no more marriages : those that are married already, all but one, shall live ; the rest shall keep as they are. To a nunnery, go.) [Exit.

Oph. O, what a noble mind is here o'erthrown !
The courtier's, scholar's, soldier's, eye, tongue, sword ;
The expectancy and rose of the fair state.
The glass of fashion and the mould of form,
The observed of all observers, quite, quite down !
And I, of ladies most deject and wretched,
That suck'd the honey of his music vows,
Now see that noble and most sovereign reason, 160
Like sweet bells jangled out of tune, and harsh ;
That unmatch'd form and feature of blown youth
Blasted with ecstasy : O, woe is me, ^{Thou wouldst}
To have seen what I have seen, see what I see !

Re-enter KING and POLONIUS.

King. Love ! his affections do not that way tend ;
Nor what he spake, though it lack'd form a little,
Was not like madness. There's something in his soul,
O'er which his melancholy sits on brood ;
And I do doubt the hatch and the disclose ^{giving}
Will be some danger : which for to prevent, 170
I have in quick determination
Thus set it down : he shall with speed to England,
For the demand of our neglected tribute :
Haply the seas and countries different

With variable objects shall expel
 This something-settled matter in his heart,
 Whereon his brains still beating puts him thus
 From fashion of himself. What think you on't?

Pol. It shall do well : but yet do I believe
 The origin and commencement of his grief 180
 Sprung from neglected love. How now, Ophelia !
 You need not tell us what Lord Hamlet said ;
 We heard it all. My lord, do as you please ;
 But, if you hold it fit, after the play
 Let his queen mother all alone entreat him
 To show his grief : let her be round with him ;
 And I'll be placed, so please you, in the ear
 Of all their conference. If she find him not,
 To England send him, or confine him where Your wisdom best shall think.

King. It shall be so : 190
Madness in great ones must not unwatch'd go! ✓
[Exeunt.]

SCENE II. A hall in the castle. Enter HAMLET and Players dramatic keeps

Ham. Speak the speech, I pray you, as I pronounced it to you, trippingly on the tongue : but if you mouth it, as many of your players do, I had as lief the town-crier spoke my lines. Nor do not ^{cut} saw the air too much with your hand, thus, but use all gently ; for in the very torrent, tempest, and, as I may say, the whirlwind of passion, you must acquire and beget a temperance that may give it smoothness. O, it offends me to the soul to hear a robustious periwigpated fellow tear a passion to tatters, to very rags, to split the ears of the groundlings, who for the most part are capable of nothing but inexplicable dumb-shows and noise : I would have such a fellow whipped for o'erdoing Termagant ; it out-herods Herod ; pray you, avoid it. a violent death in Bowlen's words 15

First Play. I warrant your honour.

Ham. Be not too ^{much} tame neither, but let your own discretion be your tutor : suit the action to the word, the word to the action ; with this special observance, that you o'erstep not the modesty of nature : for any thing so overdone is from the purpose of playing, whose end, both at the first and now, was and is, to hold, as 'twere, the mirror up to nature ; to show virtue her own feature, scorn her own image, and the very age and body of the time his form and pressure. Now this overdone, or come tardy off, though it make the unskilful laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve ; the censure of the which one must in your allowance o'erweigh a whole theatre of others. O, there be players that I have seen play, and heard others praise, and that highly, not to speak it profanely, that, neither having the accent of Christians nor the gait of Christian, pagan, nor man, have so strutted and bellowed that I have thought some of nature's journeymen had made men and not made them well, they imitated humanity so abominably.

First Play. I hope we have reformed that indifferently with us, sir. 38

Ham. O, reform it altogether. And let those that play your clowns speak no more than is set down for them ; for there be of them that will themselves laugh, to set on some quantity of barren spectators to laugh too ; though, in the mean time, some necessary question of the play be then to be considered : that's villainous, and shows a most pitiful ambition in the fool that uses it. Go, make you ready.

[Exeunt Players.]

Enter POLONIUS, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

How now, my lord ! will the king hear this piece of work ?

Pol. And the queen too, and that presently.

Ham. Bid the players make haste. [Exit Polonius.]

Will you two help to hasten them.

51

Ros. } We will, my lord ?
Guil. }

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

Ham. What ho ! Horatio.

Enter HORATIO.

Hor. Here, sweet lord, at your service.

Ham. Horatio, thou art e'en as just a man
As e'er my conversation coped withal.

Hor. O, my dear lord,—

Ham. Nay, do not think I flatter ;
For what ^{revenue} advancement may I hope from thee
That no revenue hast but thy good spirits,
To feed and clothe thee ? Why should the poor be flatter'd ?

60

No, let the ^{puffed} candied tongue lick absurd pomp,
And crook the ^{ready} ~~pregnant~~ hinges of the knee
Where thrift may follow fawning. Dost thou hear ?
Since my dear soul was mistress of her choice
And could of men distinguish, her election
Hath seal'd thee for herself ; for thou has been
As one, in suffering all, that suffers nothing,
A man that fortune's buffets and rewards
Hast ta'en with equal thanks : and blest are those Whose blood and judgement are so well commingled,

 That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger 71
 To sound what stop she please. Give me that man
That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart,
As I do thee.—Something too much of this.—
 There is a play to-night before the king ;
 One scene of it comes near the circumstance
 Which I have told thee of my father's death :
 I prithee when thou seest that act afoot,
 Even with the very comment of thy soul 80
 Observe mine uncle : if his occulted guilt
 Do not itself unkennel in one speech,
 It is a damned ghost that we have seen,
 And my imaginations are as foul
 As Vulcan's stithy. Give him needful note ;
 For I mine eyes will rivet to his face,
 And after we will both our judgements join
 In censure of his seeming.

Hor. Well, my lord :
 If he steal aught the whilst this play is playing,
 And 'scape detecting, I will pay the theft. 90

Ham. They are coming to the play ; I must be idle :
 Get you a place.

*Danish march. A flourish. Enter KING, QUEEN, POLONIUS, OPHELIA, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDEN-
 STERN, and others.*

King. How fares our cousin Hamlet ?

Ham. Excellent, i' faith ; of the chameleon's dish :
 I eat the air, promise-crammed : you cannot feed
 capons so.

King. I have nothing with this answer, Hamlet ;
 these words are not mine.

Ham. No, nor mine now. [To Polonius] My lord, you played once i' the university, you say? 100

Pol. That did I, my lord; and was accounted a good actor.

Ham. What did you enact? Ask. was much

Pol. I did enact Julius Cæsar: I was killed i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me.

Ham. It was a brute part of him to kill so capital a calf there. Be the players ready?

Ros. Ay, my lord; they stay upon your patience.

Queen. Come hither, my dear Hamlet, sit by me.

Ham. No, good mother, here's metal more attractive. Ophelia 111

Pol. [To the King] O, ho! do you mark that?

Ham. Lady, shall I lie in your lap?

[Lying down at Ophelia's feet.]

Oph. No, my lord.

Ham. I mean, my head upon your lap?

Oph. You are merry, my lord.

Ham. Who, I?

Oph. Ay, my lord. only to amuse you

Ham. O God, your only jig-maker. What should a man do but be merry? for, look you, how cheerfully my mother looks, and my father died within these two hours. 122

Oph. Nay, 'tis twice two months, my lord.

Ham. So long? Nay then, let the devil wear black, for I'll have a suit of sables. rich robes O heavens! die two months ago, and not forgotten yet? Then there's hope a great man's memory may outlive his life half a year: but, by'r lady, he must build churches, then; or else shall he suffer not thinking on, with the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is "For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot." 131

Hautboys play. The dumb-show enters.

Enter a King and a Queen very lovingly ; the Queen embracing him, and he her. She kneels, and makes show of protestation unto him. He takes her up, and declines his head upon her neck : lays him down upon a bank of flowers : she, seeing him asleep, leaves him. Anon comes in a fellow, takes off his crown, kisses it, and pours poison in the King's ears, and exit. The Queen returns ; finds the King dead, and makes passionate action. The Poisoner, with some two or three Mutes, comes in again, seeming to lament with her. The dead body is carried away. The Poisoner wooes the Queen with gifts : she seems loth and unwilling awhile, but in the end accepts his love. [Exeunt.

Oph. What means this, my lord ?

Ham. Marry, this is miching mallecho ; it means mischief.
a secret mischief

Oph. Belike this show imports the argument of the play.
plot

Enter Prologue.

Ham. We shall know by this fellow : the players keep counsel ; they'll tell all.

Oph. Will he tell us what this show meant ? 139

Ham. Ay, or any show that you'll show him : be not you ashamed to show, he'll not shame to tell you what it means.

Oph. You are naught, you are naught : I'll mark the play.

Pro. For us, and for our tragedy,
Here stooping to your clemency,
We beg your hearing patiently. [Exit.

Ham. Is this a prologue, or the posy of a ring ?

Oph. 'Tis brief, my lord.

Ham. As woman's love.

150

Enter two Players, King and Queen.

P. King. Full thirty times hath Phœbus' cart gone of ^{of sea} round ^{one on with hase lapides} Neptune's salt wash and Tellus' orb'd ground, ^{earth}
 And thirty dozen moons with borrow'd sheen, ^{Don't}
 About the world have times twelve thirties been,
 Since love our hearts and Hymen did our hands ^{God of marriage} ^{The} Unite commutual in most sacred bands. ⁶

P. Queen. So many journeys may the sun and moon
Make us again count o'er ere love be done !

But, woe is me, you are so sick of late,
 So far from cheer and from your former state, ^{anxious about} 160
 That I distrust you. Yet, though I distrust, Discomfort you, my lord, it nothing must ;
For women's fear and love holds quantity ;
 In neither aught, or in extremity.

Now, what my love is, proof hath made you know ;
 And as my love is sized, my fear is so ;
 Where love is great, the littlest doubts are fear ;
Where little fears grow great, great love grows there.

P. King. 'Faith, I must leave thee, love, and shortly too ; ^{active powers}

My operant powers their functions leave to do : 170
 And thou shalt live in this fair world behind,
 Honour'd, beloved ; and haply one as kind
 For husband shalt thou—

P. Queen. O, confound the rest !

Such love must needs be treason in my breast :

In second husband let me be accurst !

None wed the second but who kill'd the first.

Ham. [Aside] Wormwood, wormwood.

P. Queen. The instances that second marriage move
Are base respects of thrift, but none of love :
A second time I kill my husband dead, 180
When second husband kisses me in bed.

P. King. I do believe you think what now you
speak ;
But what we do determine oft we break.
Purpose is but the slave to memory,
Of violent birth, but poor validity :
Which now, like fruit unripe, sticks on the tree ;
But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.
Most necessary 'tis that we forget
To pay ourselves what to ourselves is debt :
What to ourselves in passion we propose, 190
The passion ending, doth the purpose lose.
The violence of either grief or joy
Their own enactures with themselves destroy :
Where joy most revels, grief doth most lament ;
Grief joys, joy grieves, on slender accident.
This world is not for aye, nor 'tis not strange
That even our loves should with our fortunes change ;
For 'tis a question left us yet to prove,
Whether love lead fortune, or else fortune love.
The great man down, you mark his favourite flies ;
The poor advanced makes friends of enemies. 201
And hitherto doth love on fortune tend ;
For who not needs shall never lack a friend,
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.
But, orderly to end where I begun,
Our wills and fates do so contrary run
That our devices still are overthrown ;
Our thoughts are ours, their ends none of our own :

So think thou wilt no second husband wed ; 210
But die thy thoughts when thy first lord is dead.

P. Queen. Nor earth to me give food, nor heaven light !

Sport and repose lock from me day and night !

To desperation turn my trust and hope !

An anchor's cheer in prison be my scope ! fal

Each opposite that blanks the face of joy ms

Meet what I would have well and it destroy !

Both here and hence pursue me lasting strife,

If, once a widow, ever I be wife !

Ham. If she should break it now ! 220

P. King. 'Tis deeply sworn. Sweet, leave me here awhile ;

My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile

The tedious day with sleep. [Sleeps.]

P. Queen. Sleep rock thy brain ;

And never come mischance between us twain ! [Exit.]

Ham. Madam, how like you this play ?

Queen. The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

Ham. O, but she'll keep her word.

King. Have you heard the argument ? Is there no offence in't ?

Ham. No, no, they do but jest, poison in jest ; no offence i' the world. 231

King. What do you call the play ?

Ham. The Mouse-trap. Marry, how ? Tropically.
 This play is the image of a murder done in Vienna :
 Gonzago is the duke's name ; his wife, Baptista : you shall see anon ; 'tis a knavish piece of work : but what o' that ? your majesty and we that have free souls, it touches us not : let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.

Enter LUCIANUS.

This is one Lucianus, nephew to the king. 240

Oph. You are as good as a chorus, my lord.

Ham. I could interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying.

Oph. Still better, and worse.

Ham. So you must take your husbands. Begin, murderer; leave thy damnable faces, and begin. Come: "the croaking raven doth bellow for revenge."

Luc. Thoughts black, hands apt, drugs fit, and time agreeing; Spondee (Syllable)
Confederate season, else no creature seeing;
Thou mixture rank, of midnight weeds collected, 250
With Hecate's ban thrice blasted, thrice infected,
Thy natural magic and dire property
On wholesome life usurp immediately.

[Pours, the poison into the sleeper's ears.]

Ham. He poisons him i' the garden for's estate. His name's Gonzago: the story is extant, and writ in choice Italian: you shall see anon how the murderer gets the love of Gonzago's wife.

Oph. The king rises. Line 284

Ham. What, frightened with false fire!

Queen. How fares my lord? 260

Pol. Give o'er the play.

King. Give me some light: away!

All. Lights, lights, lights!

[Exeunt all but Hamlet and Horatio.]

Ham. Why, let the stricken deer go weep, wounded
The hart ungalled play;

For some must watch, while some must sleep:

So runs the world away.

Would not this, sir, and a forest of feathers—if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me—with two Provincial in patterns roses on my razed shoes, get me a fellowship in a cry of players, sir ? 271

disf
 Hor. Half a share.

Ham. A whole one, I.

For thou dost know, O Damon dear,
 This realm dismantled was.

Of Jove himself; and now reigns here

A very, very—pajock. placert, 168

Hor. You might have rhymed.

Ham. O good Horatio, I'll take the ghost's word for a thousand pound. Didst perceive ? 280

Hor. Very well, my lord.

Ham. Upon the talk of poisoning ?

Hor. I did very well note him.

Ham. Ah, ah ! Come, some music ! come, the recorders ! a word full

For if the king like not the comedy,

Why then, belike, he likes it not, perdy.

Come, some music !

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Guil. Good my lord, vouchsafe me a word with you.

Ham. Sir, a whole history. 290

Guil. The king, sir,—

Ham. Ay, sir, what of him ?

Guil. Is in his retirement marvellous distempered.

Ham. With drink, sir ?

Guil. No, my lord, rather with choler. anger or chol

Ham. Your wisdom should show itself more richer to signify this to his doctor ; for, for me to put him to his purgation would perhaps plunge him into far more choler.

Guil. Good my lord, put your discourse into some frame and start not so wildly from my affair. 301

Ham. I am tame, sir : pronounce.

Guil. The queen, your mother, in most great affliction of spirit, hath sent me to you.

Ham. You are welcome.

Guil. Nay, good my lord, this courtesy is not of the right breed. If it shall please you to make me a wholesome answer, I will do your mother's commandment : if not, your pardon and my return shall be the end of my business. 310

Ham. Sir, I cannot.

Guil. What, my lord ?

Ham. Make you a wholesome answer ; my wit's diseased : but, sir, such answer as I can make, you shall command ; or, rather, as you say, my mother : therefore no more, but to the matter : my mother, you say,—

Ros. Then thus she says ; your behaviour hath struck her into amazement and admiration. not appro

Ham. O wonderful son, that can so astonish a mother ! But is there no sequel at the heels of this mother's admiration ? Impart. Result 321

Ros. She desires to speak with you in her closet, ere you go to bed. in closet

Ham. We shall obey, were she ten times our mother. Have you any further trade with us ? talk

Ros. My lord, you once did love me.

Ham. So I do still, by these pickers and stealers. he

Ros. Good my lord, what is your cause of distemper ?
you do, surely, bar the door upon your own liberty, if you deny your griefs to your friend. 330

Ham. Sir, I lack advancement.

Ros. How can that be, when you have the voice of the king himself for your succession in Denmark ?

Ham. Ay, sir, but "While the grass grows,"—the proverb is something musty.

Re-enter Players with recorders.

O, the recorders ! let me see one. To withdraw with you :—why do you go about to recover the wind of me, as if you would drive me into a toil ? Trap

Guil. O, my lord, if my duty be too bold, my love is too unmannerly. 340

Ham. I do not well understand that. Will you play upon this pipe ?

Guil. My lord, I cannot.

Ham. I pray you.

Guil. Believe me, I cannot.

Ham. I do beseech you.

Guil. I know no touch of it, my lord.

Ham. 'Tis as easy as lying : govern these ventages ' with your fingers and thumb, give it breath with your mouth, and it will discourse most eloquent music. Look you, these are the stops. 351

Guil. But these cannot I command to any utterance of harmony : I have not the skill.

Ham. Why, look you now, how unworthy a thing you make of me ! You would play upon me ; you would seem to know my stops ; you would pluck out the heart of my mystery ; you would sound me from my lowest note to the top of my compass : and there is much music, excellent voice, in this little organ ; yet cannot you make it speak. 'Sblood, do you think I am easier to be played on than a pipe ? Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, yet you cannot play upon me. 363

Enter POLONIUS.

God bless you, sir !

Pol. My lord, the queen would speak with you, and presently.

Ham. Do you see yonder cloud that's almost in shape of a camel?

Pol. By the mass, and 'tis like a camel, indeed.

Ham. Methinks it is like a weasel. 370

Pol. It is backed like a weasel.

Ham. Or like a whale?

Pol. Very like a whale.

Ham. Then I will come to my mother by and by.

[Aside] They fool me to the top of my bent. I will come by and by.

Pol. I will say so.

Ham. By and by is easily said. [Exit Polonius.]

Leave me, friends. ~~End of night~~ [Exeunt all but Hamlet.]

'Tis now the very witching time of night, 380

When churchyards yawn and hell itself breathes out

Contagion to this world : now could I drink hot blood,

And do such bitter business as the day

Would quake to look on. Soft ! now to my mother.

O heart, lose not thy nature ; let not ever Condemn

The soul of Nero enter this firm bosom : rather his mother

Let me be cruel, not unnatural :

I will speak daggers to her, but use none Violent

My tongue and soul in this be hypocrites ; words

How in my words soever she be shent, reproved 390

To give them seals never, my soul, consent ! [Exit.]

SCENE III. A room in the castle. Enter
KING, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. I like him not, nor stands it safe with us
To let his madness range. Therefore prepare you ;
I your commission will forthwith dispatch,

And he to England shall along with you :
 The terms of our estate may not endure
 Hazard so near us as doth hourly grow
 Out of his lunacies.

Guil. We will ourselves provide :
 Most holy and religious fear it is
 To keep those many many bodies safe
 That live and feed upon your majesty. 10

Ros. The single and peculiar life is bound,
 With all the strength and armour of the mind,
 To keep itself from ^{harm}noyance ; but much more
 That spirit upon whose weal depend and rest
 The lives of many. The cease of majesty
 Dies not alone ; but, like a gulf, doth draw
 What's near it with it : it is a massy wheel,
 Fix'd on the summit of the highest mount,
 To whose huge spokes ten thousand lesser things
 Are ~~moored~~ ^{adjoin'd} and adjoin'd ; which, when it falls, 20
 Each small ~~annexment~~ ^{consequence} petty consequence,
 Attends the boisterous ruin. Never alone
 Did the king sigh, but with a general groan.

King. Arm you, I pray you, to this speedy voyage ;
 For we will fetters put upon this fear,
 Which now goes too free-footed.

Guil. }
Ros. }

We will haste us.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

Enter POLONIUS.

Pol. My lord, he's going to his mother's closet :
 Behind the arras I'll convey myself,
 To hear the process ; I'll warrant she'll tax him home :
 And, as you said, and wisely was it said, 30

'Tis meet that some more audience than a mother,
 Since nature makes them partial, should o'erhear
The speech, of vantage. Fare you well, my liege :
 I'll call upon you ere you go to bed,
 And tell you what I know.

King.

Thanks, dear my lord.

bare

[Exit Polonius.]

O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven ;
 It hath the primal eldest curse upon't,
A brother's murder. Pray can I not,
 Though inclination be as sharp as will :
 My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent ;
 And, like a man to double business bound,
I stand in pause where I shall first begin,
And both neglect. What if this cursed hand
Were thicker than itself with brother's blood,
 Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens
 To wash it white as snow ? Whereto serves mercy
But to confront the visage of offence ?
 And what's in prayer but this two-fold force,
 To be forestalled ere we come to fall,
 Or pardon'd being down ? Then I'll look up ;
 My fault is past. But, O, what form of prayer
 Can serve my turn ? "Forgive me my foul murder" ?
 That cannot be ; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen
 May one be pardon'd and retain the offence ?
 In the corrupted currents of this world
 Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice,
 And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law : but 'tis not so above ;
 There is no shuffling, there the action lies
 In his true nature : and we ourselves compell'd,

Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults,
 To give in evidence. What then? what rests?
 Try what repentance can: what can it not?
 Yet what can it when one can not repent?
 O wretched state! O bosom black as death!
 O limed soul, that, struggling to be free,
 Art more engaged! Help, angels! Make assay!
 Bow, stubborn knees; and, heart with strings of steel,
 Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe! 71
 All may be well. muscles [Retires and kneels.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now might I do it ^{chop off} pat, now he is praying;
 And now I'll do it. And so he goes to heaven;
 And so am I revenged. That would be scann'd:
 A villain kills my father; and for that,
 I, his sole son, do this same villain send in temper
 To heaven.

O, this is hire and salary, not revenge.
 He took my father grossly, full of bread; with the man 80
 With all his crimes broad blown, as flush as May;
 And how his audit stands who knows save heaven?
 But in our circumstance and course of thought,
 'Tis heavy with him: and am I then revenged,
 To take him in the purging of his soul, purify
 When he is fit and season'd for his passage?
 No!

Up, sword; and know thou a more horrid hent:
 When he is drunk asleep, or in his rage,
 Or in the incestuous pleasure of his bed;
 At gaming, swearing, or about some act inces
 That has no relish of salvation in't;
 Then trip him, that his heels may kick at heaven,
 And that his soul may be as damn'd and black

HAMLET

SCENE IV. The Queen's closet. Enter QUEEN and POLONIUS.

Pol. He will come straight. Look you lay home to him :

Tell him his pranks have been too broad to bear with,
And that your grace hath screen'd and stood between Much heat and him. I'll scone me even here.

Pray you, be round with him. He

Ham. [Within.] Mother, mother, mother !

Queen. I'll warrant you,

Fear me not : withdraw, I hear him coming.

[Polonius hides behind the arras.

Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Now, mother, what's the matter ?

Queen. Hamlet, thou hast thy father much offended.

Ham. Mother, you have my father much offended.

Queen. Come, come, you answer with an idle tongue. Ham

Ham. Go, go, you question with a wicked tongue.

Queen. Why, how now, Hamlet ! 13

Ham. What's the matter now ?

Queen. Have you forgot me ? Cron

Ham. No, by the rood, not so :

You are the queen, your husband's brother's wife ;

And—would it were not so !—you are my mother.

Queen. Nay, then, I'll set those to you that can speak.

Ham. Come, come, and sit you down ; you shall not budge ; move very interesting ground origina
 You go not till I set you up a glass
 Where you may see the inmost part of you.

Queen. What wilt thou do ? thou wilt not murder me ? ugly face

Help, help, ho !

Pol. [Behind.] What, ho ! help, help, help !

Ham. [Drawing.] How now ! a rat ? Dead, for ducat, dead ! [Makes a pass through the arras]

Pol. [Behind.] O, I am slain ! [Falls and dies]

Queen. O me, what hast thou done ?

Ham. Nay, I know not

Is it the king ?

Queen. O, what a rash and bloody deed is this !

Ham. A bloody deed ! almost as bad, good mother,
As kill a king, and marry with his brother.

Queen. As kill a king !

Ham. Ay, lady, 'twas my word.

[Lifts up the arras and discovers Poloni]

Thou wretched, rash, intruding fool, farewell !

I took thee for thy better : take thy fortune ;

Thou find'st to be too busy is some danger.

Leave wringing of your hands : peace ! sit you down and let me wring your heart ; for so I shall,

If it be made of penetrable stuff,

If damned custom have not brass'd it so staked it

That it be proof and bulwark against sense.

Queen. What have I done, that thou dar'st wag thy tongue

In noise so rude against me ? security or defence

Ham.

Such an act

That blurs the grace and blush of modesty,

Calls virtue hypocrite, takes off the rose

From the fair forehead of an innocent love
 And sets a blister there, makes marriage-vows
 As false as dicers' oaths : O, such a deed
 As from the body of contraction plucks
 The very soul, and sweet religion makes
 A rhapsody of words : heaven's face doth glow ;
 Yea, this solidity and compound mass, earth
 With tristful visage, as against the doom, Y
 Is thought-sick at the act. ref: to Day of Judgment. 50

Queen.

Ah me, what act,

That roars so loud, and thunders in the index ? beg.

Ham. Look here, upon this picture, and on this,
 The counterfeit presentment of two brothers.
 See, what a grace was seated on this brow ; God of Hyperion's curls ; the front of Jove himself ;
An eye like Mars, to threaten and command ;
 A station like the herald Mercury the messenger of
 New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill ; God from me
 A combination and a form indeed, leaving 60
 Where every god did seem to set his seal,
 To give the world assurance of a man :

This was your husband. Look you now, what follows :

Here is your husband ; like a mildew'd ear, A kind

Blasting his wholesome brother. Have you eyes ?

Could you on this fair mountain leave to feed,

And batten on this moor ? Ha ! have you eyes ?

You cannot call it love ; for at your age

The hey-day in the blood is tame, it's humble, 69

And waits upon the judgement : and what judgement

Would step from this to this ? Sense, sure, you have,

Else could you not have motion ; but sure, that sense

Is apoplex'd ; for madness would not err,

Nor sense to ecstasy was ne'er so thrall'd

But it reserved some quantity of choice,

To serve in such a difference. What devil was't
 That thus hath cozen'd you at hoodman blind ?
Eyes without feeling, feeling without sight,
Ears without hands or eyes, smelling sans all,
 Or but a sickly part of one true sense
 Could not so mope. foolish
 O shame ! where is thy blush ? Rebellious hell,
If thou canst mutine in a matron's bones,
To flaming youth let virtue be as wax,
And melt in her own fire : proclaim no shame
When the compulsive ardour gives the charge,
 Since frost itself as actively doth burn,
 And reason pandars will.

Queen. O Hamlet, speak no more
Thou turn'st mine eyes into my very soul ;
And there I see such black and grained spots deeper
As will not leave their tinct. Colour
 These words, like daggers, enter in mine ears ;
 No more, sweet Hamlet !

Ham. A murderer and a villain
A slave that is not twentieth part the tithe 10 of us
Of your precedent lord ; a vice of kings ;
A cutpurse of the empire and the rule, big game
That from a shelf the precious diadem stole,
And put it in his pocket ! ensign of royalty

Queen.

No more !

Ham. A king of shreds and patches,—

Enter Ghost

Save me, and hover o'er me with your wings,
You heavenly guards ! What would your gracious figure ?

Queen. Alas, he's mad !

Ham. Do you not come your tardy son to chide,
That, lapsed in time and passion, lets go by
The important acting of your dread command?
O, say!

Ghost. Do not forget: this visitation
Is but to whet thy almost blunted purpose.
But, look, amazement on thy mother sits:
O, step between her and her fighting soul:
Conceit in weakest bodies strongest works:
Speak to her, Hamlet.

Ham. How is it with you, lady?

Queen. Alas, how is't with you,
That you do bend your eye on vacancy,
And with the incorporal air do hold discourse?
Forth at your eyes your spirits wildly peep;
And, as the sleeping soldiers in the alarm,
Your bedded hair, like life in excrements,
Starts up, and stands on end. O gentle son,
Upon the heat and flame of thy distemper
Sprinkle cool patience. Whereon do you look?

Ham. On him, on him! Look you, how pale he glares!
His form and cause conjoin'd, preaching to stones,
Would make them capable. Do not look upon me;
Lest with this piteous action you convert
My stern effects: then what I have to do
Will want true colour; tears perchance for blood.

Queen. To whom do you speak this?

Ham. Do you see nothing there?

Queen. Nothing at all; yet all that is I see.

Ham. Nor did you nothing hear?

Queen. No, nothing but ourselves.

Ham. Why, look you there! look, how it steals away!

My father, in his habit as he lived !

Look, where he goes, even now, out at the portal!

[Exit Ghost.]

Queen. This is the very coinage of your brain :
This bodiless creation ecstasy
Is very cunning in. madness product of

Ham. Ecstasy !

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And makes as healthful music : it is not madness
That I have utter'd : bring me to the test,
And I the matter will re-word : which madness 140
Would gambol from. Mother, for love of grace,
Lay not that flattering unction to your soul,
That not your trespass, but my madness speaks :
It will but skin and film the ulcerous place,
Whiles rank corruption, mining all within,
Infects unseen. Confess yourself to heaven ;
Repent what's past ; avoid what is to come ;
And do not spread the compost on the weeds,
To make them ranker. Forgive me this my virtue ;
For in the fatness of these pursy times 150
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg, for
Yea, curb and woo for leave to do him good.

Queen. O Hamlet, thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Ham. O, throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
Good night : but go not to mine uncle's bed ;
Assume a virtue, if you have it not.

That monster, custom, who all sense doth eat,
Of habits devil, is angel yet in this,
That to the use of actions fair and good 160
He likewise gives a frock or livery,
That aptly is put on.
For use almost can change the stamp of nature,

And either master the devil, or throw him out
With wondrous potency. Once more, good night :
 And when you are desirous to be bless'd,
 I'll blessing beg of you. For this same lord,

[Pointing to Polonius.

I do repent : but heaven hath pleased it so,
 To punish me with this and this with me, Polonius 170
 That I must be their scourge and minister.
 I will bestow him, and will answer well → Claudius
 The death I gave him. So, again, good night.
I must be cruel, only to be kind :

Thus bad begins and worse remains behind.

One word more, good lady.

Queen.

What shall I do ?

Ham. Not this, by no means, that I bid you do :
Let the bloat king tempt you again to bed ;
Pinch wanton on your cheek ; call you his mouse ;
Make you to ravel all this matter out,
That I essentially am not in madness, 180
But mad in craft. 'Twere good you let him know ;
 For who, that's but a queen, fair, sober, wise,
 Would from a paddock, from a bat, a gib, low cat
 Such dear concernings hide ? who would do so ?
 No, in despite of sense and secrecy,
 Unpeg the basket on the house's top,
 Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape,
To try conclusions, in the basket creep,
And break your own neck down.

Queen. Be thou assured, if words be made of breath,
 And breath of life, I have no life to breathe 191
 What thou hast said to me.

Ham. I must to England ; you know that ?

Queen.

Alack,

I had forgot : 'tis so concluded on.

Ham. There's letters seal'd : and my two school-fellows, ~~mandate~~ letter.
 Whom I will trust as I will adders fang'd,
 They bear the mandate ; they must sweep my way,
 And marshal me to knavery. Let it work ;
For 'tis the sport to have the enginer
Hoist with his own petar : and't shall go hard 200
 But I will delve one yard below their mines,
 And blow them at the moon : O, 'tis most sweet,
 When in one line two crafts directly meet.
 This man shall set me packing : heaving me off
 I'll lug the guts into the neighbour room.
 Mother, good night. Indeed this counsellor
 Is now most still, most secret and most grave,
 Who was in life a foolish prating knave.
 Come, sir, to draw toward an end with you.
 Good night, mother. 210

[Exeunt severally ; Hamlet dragging in Polonius.]

ACT IV

SCENE I. A room in the castle. Enter KING, QUEEN, ROSENCRANTZ, and GUILDENSTERN.

King. There's matter in these sighs, these profound heaves : from a man's grief
You must translate : 'tis fit we understand them.
Where is your son ?

Queen. Bestow this place on us a little while.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

Ah, mine own lord, what have I seen to-night !

King. What, Gertrude ? How does Hamlet ?

Queen. Mad as the sea and wind, when both contend

Which is the mightier : in his lawless fit,
Behind the arras hearing something stir,
Whips out his rapier, cries, " A rat, a rat ! " 10
And, in this brainish apprehension, kills
The unseen good old man.

King. O heavy deed !
It had been so with us, had we been there :
His liberty is full of threats to all ;
To you yourself, to us, to every one.
Alas, how shall this bloody deed be answer'd ?
It will be laid to us, whose providence
Should have kept short, restrain'd, and out of haunt,
This mad young man : but so much was our love,
We would not understand what was most fit ; 20

But, like the owner of a foul disease,
To keep it from divulging, let it feed
Even on the pith of life. Where is he gone ?

Queen. To draw apart the body he hath kill'd :
O'er whom his very madness, like some ore
Among a mineral of metals base,
Shows itself pure ; he weeps for what is done.

King. O Gertrude, come away !
The sun no sooner shall the mountains touch,
But we will ship him hence ; and this vile deed 30
We must, with all our majesty and skill,
Both countenance and excuse. Ho, Guildenstern !

Re-enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Friends both, go join you with some further aid :
Hamlet in madness hath Polonius slain,
And from his mother's closet hath he dragg'd him :
Go seek him out ; speak fair, and bring the body
Into the chapel. I pray you, haste in this.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

Come, Gertrude, we'll call up our wisest friends ;
And let them know, both what we mean to do,
And what's untimely done : so, haply, slander, 40
Whose whisper o'er the world's diameter,
As level as the cannon to his blank,
Transports his poison'd shot, may miss our name,
And hit the woundless air. O, come away !
My soul is full of discord and dismay. [Exeunt.]

SCENE II. Another room in the castle. Enter HAMLET.

Ham. Safely stowed.

Ros. } [Within] Hamlet ! Lord Hamlet !
Guil. }

Ham. But soft, what noise? who calls on Hamlet?
O, here they come.

Enter ROSENCRANTZ and GUILDENSTERN.

Ros. What have you done, my lord, with the dead body?

Ham. Compounded it with dust, whereto 'tis kin. ^{Do not throw out and behest 1 rule}

Ros. Tell us where 'tis, that we may take it thence,
And bear it to the chapel.

Ham. Do not believe it. 10

Ros. Believe what?

Ham. That I can keep your counsel and not mine own. Besides, to be demanded of a sponge! what replication should be made by the son of a king?

Ros. Take you me for a sponge, my lord?

Ham. Ay, sir, that soaks up the king's countenance, his rewards, his authorities. But such officers do the king best service in the end: he keeps them, like an ape doth nuts, in the corner of his jaw; first mouthed, to be last swallowed: when he needs what you have gleaned, it is but squeezing you, and, sponge, you shall be dry again. 22

Ros. I understand you not, my lord.

Ham. I am glad of it: a knavish speech sleeps in a foolish ear.

Ros. My lord, you must tell us where the body is, and go with us to the king.

Ham. The body is with the king, but the king is not with the body. The king is a thing—

Guil. A thing, my lord! 30

Ham. Of nothing: bring me to him. Hide fox, and all after. [Exeunt.]

allusion to the game of Hide & Seek

SCENE III. Another room in the castle. Enter KING, attended.

King. I have sent to seek him, and to find the body.
 How dangerous is it that this man goes loose !
 Yet must not we put the strong law on him :
 He's loved of the distracted multitude, ^{forlorn}
Who like not in their judgement, but their eyes :
And where 'tis so, the offender's scourge is weigh'd,
But never the offence. To bear all smooth and even,
 This sudden sending him away must seem Deliberate pause : diseases desperate grown
 By desperate appliance are relieved, 10
 Or not at all.

Result of deliberate calculation

Enter ROSENCRANTZ.

How now ! what hath befall'n ?

Ros. Where the dead body is bestow'd, my lord,
 We cannot get from him.

King. But where is he ?

Ros. Without, my lord ; guarded, to know your pleasure. ^{standing}

King. Bring him before us.

Ros. Ho, Guildenstern ! bring in my lord.

Enter HAMLET and GUILDENSTERN.

King. Now, Hamlet, where's Polonius ? →

Ham. At supper.

King. At supper ! where ?

Ham. Not where he eats, but where he is eaten : a certain convocation of politic worms are e'en at him.
 Your worm is your only emperor for diet : we fat all creatures else to fat us, and we fat ourselves for maggots : your fat king and your lean beggar is but

20 variable service, two dishes, but to one table : that's the end.

King. Alas, alas !

Ham. A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

King. What dost thou mean by this ? 31

Ham. Nothing but to show you how a king may go a progress through the guts of a beggar.

King. Where is Polonius ?

Ham. In heaven ; send thither to see : if your messenger find him not there, seek him i' the other place yourself. But indeed, if you find him not within this month, you shall nose him as you go up the stairs into the lobby.

King. Go seek him there. [To some Attendants.

Ham. He will stay till you come. 41

[Exeunt Attendants.

King. Hamlet, this deed, for thine especial safety,—Which we do tender, as we dearly grieve For that which thou hast done,—must send thee hence With fiery quickness : therefore prepare thyself ; The bark is ready, and the wind at help, The associates tend, and every thing is bent For England.

Ham. . . . For England !

King. Ay, Hamlet.

Ham. Good.

King. So is it, if thou knew'st our purposes. —

Ham. I see a cherub^{and} that sees them. But, come ; for England ! Farewell, dear mother. 51

King. Thy loving father, Hamlet.

Ham. My mother : father and mother is man and wife ; man and wife is one flesh ; and so, my mother. Come, for England ! [Exit.

King. Follow him at foot ; tempt him with speed aboard ;
 Delay it not ; I'll have him hence to-night :
 Away ! for every thing is seal'd and done
 That else leans on the affair : pray you, make haste.

[Exeunt Rosencrantz and Guildenstern.]

And, England, if my love thou hold'st at aught— 60
 As my great power thereof may give thee sense,
 Since yet thy cicatrice looks raw and red Scar
 After the Danish sword, and thy free awe
 Pays homage to us—thou mayst not coldly set
Our sovereign process ; which imports at full,
 By letters conjuring to that effect,
 The present death of Hamlet. Do it, England ;
 For like the hætic in my blood he rages,
 And thou must cure me : till I know 'tis done, 69
 Howe'er my haps, my joys were ne'er begun. [Exit.]

SCENE IV. A plain in Denmark. Enter FORTINBRAS,⁷ a Captain, and Soldiers, marching.

For. Go, captain, from me greet the Danish king ;
 Tell him that, by his license, Fortinbras
 Craves the conveyance of a promised march
 Over his kingdom. You know the rendezvous.
 If that his majesty would aught with us,
 We shall express our duty in his eye ;
 And let him know so.

Cap. I will do't, my lord.

For. Go softly on. [Exeunt Fortinbras and Soldiers.]

Enter HAMLET, ROSENCRANTZ, GUILDENSTERN, and others.

Ham. Good sir, whose powers are these ?

Cap. They are of Norway, sir.

Ham. How purposed, sir, I pray you? ^{what has he} ^{to}

Cap. Against some part of Poland. ^{unhappy} ^{him for}

Ham. Who commands them, sir?

Cap. The nephew to old Norway, Fortinbras.

Ham. Goes it against the main of Poland, sir,
Or for some frontier?

Cap. Truly to speak, and with no addition,
We go to gain a little patch of ground

That hath in it no profit but the name.

To pay five ducats, five, I would not farm it; ^{cultivate} ²⁰

Nor will it yield to Norway or the Pole

A ranker rate, should it be sold in fee.

Ham. Why, then the Polack never will defend it.

Cap. Yes, it is already garrison'd.

Ham. Two thousand souls and twenty thousand ducats ^{etc.}

Will not debate the question of this straw: ^{useless grass}

This is the imposthume of much wealth and peace,

That inward breaks, and shows no cause without

Why the man dies. I humbly thank you, sir. ²⁹

Cap. God be wi' you, sir. ^[Exit.]

Ros. Will't please you go, my lord?

Ham. I'll be with you straight. Go a little before.

^{warn to me} ^[Exeunt all except Hamlet.]

How all occasions do inform against me,

And spur my dull revenge! What is a man,

If his chief good and market of his time

Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.

Sure, he that made us with such large discourse, ^{words}

Looking before and after, gave us not reason ^{for}

That capability and god-like reason

To fust in us unused. Now, whether it be

Bestial oblivion, or some craven scruple—

Of thinking too precisely on the event,
 A thought which, quarter'd, hath but one part wisdom
 And ever three parts coward, I do not know
 Why yet I live to say "This thing's to do";
 Sith I have cause and will and strength and means
To do't. Examples gross as earth exhort me:
 Witness this army of such mass and charge
 Led by a delicate and tender prince,
 Whose spirit with divine ambition puff'd
Makes mouths at the invisible event,
 Exposing what is mortal and unsure
 To all that fortune, death and danger dare,
 Even for an egg-shell. Rightly to be great
 Is not to stir without great argument,
 But greatly to find quarrel in a straw, howe to
 When honour's at the stake. ~~How~~ stand I then,
 That have a father kill'd, a mother stain'd,
 Excitements of my reason and my blood,
 And let all sleep? while, to my shame, I see
 The imminent death of twenty thousand men,
 That, for a fantasy and trick of fame,
 Go to their graves like beds, fight for a plot
 Whereon the numbers cannot try the cause,
 Which is not tomb enough and continent
 To hide the slain? O, from this time forth,
 My thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth! [Exit.]

SCENE V. Elsinore. A room in the castle. Enter
 QUEEN, HORATIO, and a Gentleman.

Queen. I will not speak with her.

Gent. She is importunate, indeed distract:
 Her moods will needs be pitied.

Queen.

What would she have?

Gent. She speaks much of her father ; says she hears There's tricks i' the world ; and hems, and beats her heart ;

Spurns enviously at straws ; speaks things in doubt,
That carry but half sense : her speech is nothing,
Yet the unshaped use of it doth move
The hearers to collection ; they aim at it,
And botch the words up fit to their own thoughts ; 10
Which, as ^a ~~her~~ ^{adjust} winks, and nods, and gestures yield them,

Indeed would make one think there might be thought,
Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily.

Hor. 'Twere good she were spoken with ; for she may strew ^{quite out}
Dangerous conjectures in ill-breeding minds.

Queen. Let her come in. [Exit Horatio.]

To my sick soul, as sin's true nature is,
Each toy seems prologue to some great amiss ;
So full of artless jealousy is guilt, ^{dissembler}
It spills itself in fearing to be spilt. 20

Re-enter HORATIO, with OPHELIA.

Oph. Where is the beauteous majesty of Denmark ?

Queen. How now, Ophelia ?

Oph. [Sings] How should I your true love know
From another one ?

^a poet By his cockle hat and staff,
And his sandal shoon. ^{shoes}

Queen. Alas, sweet lady, what imports this song ?

Oph. Say you ? nay, pray you, mark.

[Sings] He is dead and gone, lady,

He is dead and gone ;

At his head a grass-green turf,

At his heels a stone. 30

Queen. Nay, but, Ophelia,—

Oph. Pray you, mark.

Sings White his shroud as the mountain snow;

Enter KING.

Queen. Alas, look here, my lord.

Oph. [Sings] Larded with sweet flowers ;

Shield Which bewept to the grave did go
 With true-love showers.

King. How do you, pretty lady ?

40

Oph. Well, God 'ild you ! They say the owl was a baker's daughter. Lord, we know what we are, but know not what we may be. God be at your table !

King. Conceit upon her father. He is a jealous fellow.

Oph. Pray you, let's have no words of this : but when they ask you what it means, say you this :

[Sings] To-morrow is Saint Valentine's day,

 All in the morning betime,

 And I a maid at your window,

 To be your Valentine.

50

King. How long has she been thus ?

Oph. I hope all will be well. We must be patient : but I cannot choose but weep, to think they should lay him i' the cold ground. My brother shall know of it : and so I thank you for your good counsel. Come, my coach ! Good night, ladies ; good night, sweet ladies ; good night, good night. [Exit.]

King. Follow her close ; give her good watch, I pray you. [Exit Horatio.]

O, this is the poison of deep grief ; it springs

All from her father's death. O Gertrude, Gertrude, 60

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,

But in battalions. First, her father slain :

Next, your son gone ; and he most violent author

Of his own just remove : the people muddied,
Thick and unwholesome in their thoughts and whispers,

For good Polonius' death ; and we have done but greenly, foolishly

In hugger-mugger to inter him : poor Ophelia
Divided from herself and her fair judgement,
Without the which we are pictures, or mere beasts :
Last, and as much containing as all these, 70

Her brother is in secret come from France ;

Feeds on his wonder, keeps himself in clouds,

And wants not buzzers to infect his ear

With pestilent speeches of his father's death ;

Wherein necessity, of matter beggar'd,

Will nothing stick our person to arraign

In ear and ear. O my dear Gertrude, this,

Like to a murdering-piece, in many places

Gives me superfluous death. [A noise within.

Queen. Alack, what noise is this ?

King. Where are my Switzers ? Let them guard the door.

Swiss Guard
Swiss body guards of pope 80
Enter another Gentleman.

What is the matter ?

Gent. Swearing Save yourself, my lord :

The ocean, floundering overpeering of his list,

Eats not the flats with more impetuous haste

Than young Laertes, in a riotous head,

O'erbears your officers. The rabble call him lord ;

And, as the world were now but to begin,

Antiquity forgot, custom not known,

The ratifiers and props of every word,
They cry " Choose we : Laertes shall be king : "

Caps, hands, and tongues, applaud it to the clouds :

“Laertes shall be king, Laertes king !”

Queen. How cheerfully on the false trail they cry !
O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs ! She may King. The doors are broke. [Noise within.]

Enter LAERTES, armed ; Danes following.

Laer. Where is this king ? Sirs, stand you all without.

Danes. No, let's come in.

Laer. I pray you, give me leave.

Danes. We will, we will.

[They retire without the door.]

Laer. I thank you : keep the door. O thou vile king,

Give me my father !

Queen. Calmly, good Laertes.

Laer. That drop of blood that's calm proclaims me bastard. opha 100

King. What is the cause, Laertes,
That thy rebellion looks so giant-like ?
Let him go, Gertrude ; do not fear our person :
There's such divinity doth hedge a king, I'm
That treason can but peep to what it would, to Acts little of his will. Tell me, Laertes,
Why thou art thus incensed. Let him go, Gertrude.
Speak, man.

Laer. Where is my father ?

King. Dead.

Queen. But not by him.

King. Let him demand his fill.

Laer. How came he dead ? I'll not be juggled with : 110

To hell, allegiance ! vows, to the blackest devil !

Conscience and grace, to the profoundest pit !
 I dare damnation. To this point I stand,
 That both the worlds I give to negligence,
 Let come what comes ; only I'll be revenged
 Most thoroughly for my father.

King. Who shall stay you ?

Laer. My will, not all the world :
 And for my means, I'll husband them so well,
 They shall go far with little.

King. Good Laertes,
 If you desire to know the certainty 120
 Of your dear father's death, is't writ in your revenge,
 That, swoopstake, you will draw both friend and foe,
 Winner and loser ?

Laer. None but his enemies.

King. Will you know them then ?

Laer. To his good friends thus wide I'll ope my arms ;
 And like the kind life-rendering pelican, was supposed to Repast them with my blood. feed its own

King. Why, now you speak. its duty
 Like a good child and a true gentleman.
 That I am guiltless of your father's death,
 And am most sensibly in grief for it, 130
 It shall as level to your judgement pierce
 As day does to your eye.

Danes. [Within] Let her come in.

Laer. How now ! what noise is that ?

Re-enter OPHELIA.

O heat, dry up my brains ! tears seven times salt,
 Burn out the sense and virtue of mine eye !
 By heaven, thy madness shall be paid with weight,

Till our scale turn the beam. O rose of May !
 Dear maid, kind sister, sweet Ophelia !
 O heavens ! is't possible, a young maid's wits
 Should be as mortal as an old man's life ? 140
 Nature is fine in love, and where 'tis fine,
 It sends some precious instance of itself
 After the thing it loves.

Oph. [Sings]

They bore him barefaced on the bier :
 Hey non nonny, nonny, hey nonny ;
 And in his grave rain'd many a tear :—

Fare you well, my dove !

Laer. Hadst thou thy wits, and didst persuade revenge,
 It could not move thus.

Oph. [Sings] You must sing a-down a-down, 150
 An you call him a-down-a.

O, how the wheel becomes it ! It is the false steward that stole his master's daughter.

Laer. This nothing's more than matter.

Oph. There's rosemary, that's for remembrance ; pray, love, remember : and there is pansies, that's for thoughts.

Laer. A document in madness, thoughts and remembrance fitted.

Oph. There's fennel for you, and columbines :
 there's rue for you ; and here's some for me : we may call it herb-grace o' Sundays : O, you must wear your rue with a difference. There's a daisy : I would give you some violets, but they withered all when my father died : they say he made a good end,—

[Sings] For bonnie sweet Robin is all my joy.

Laer. Thought and affliction, passion, hell itself,
 She turns to favour and to prettiness.

Oph. [Sings] And will he not come again ?
 And will he not come again ? 170
 No, no, he is dead :
 Go to thy death-bed :
 He never will come again.

white as flax
 His beard was as white as snow,
 All flaxen was his poll : head
 He is gone, he is gone,
 And we cast away moan :
 God ha' mercy on his soul !
 And of all Christian souls, I pray God. God be wi' ye.
 [Exit. 180

Laer. Do you see this, O God ?

King. Laertes, I must commune with your grief,
 Or you deny me right. Go but apart,
 Make choice of whom your wisest friends you will,
 And they shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me :
 If by direct or by collateral hand indirect
 They find us touch'd, we will our kingdom give,
 Our crown, our life, and all that we call ours,
 To you in satisfaction ; but if not,
 Be you content to lend your patience to us,
 And we shall jointly labour with your soul 190
 To give it due content.

Laer. Let this be so ;
 His means of death, his obscure funeral—
 No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,
 No noble rite nor formal ostentation—
 Cry to be heard, as 'twere from heaven to earth,
 That I must call't in question.

King. So you shall ;
 And where the offence is let the great axe fall.
 I pray you, go with me. [Exeunt.

SCENE VI. Another room in the castle. Enter HORATIO and a Servant.

Hor. What are they that would speak with me?

Serv. Sailors, sir : they say they have letters for you.

Hor. Let them come in. [Exit Servant.]

I do not know from what part of the world
I should be greeted, if not from lord Hamlet.

Enter Sailors.

First Sail. God bless you, sir.

Hor. Let him bless thee too.

First Sail. He shall, sir, an't please him. There's a letter for you, sir : it comes from the ambassador that was bound for England ; if your name be Horatio, as I am let to know it is. 11

Hor. [Reads] " Horatio, when thou shalt have overlooked this, give these fellows some means to the king : they have letters for him. Ere we were two days old at sea, a pirate of very warlike appointment gave us chase. Finding ourselves too slow of sail, we put on a compelled valour, and in the grapple I boarded them : on the instant they got clear of our ship ; so I alone became their prisoner. They have dealt with me like thieves of mercy : but they knew what they did ; I am to do a good turn for them. Let the king have the letters I have sent ; and repair thou to me with as much speed as thou wouldst fly death. I have words to speak in thine ear will make thee dumb ; yet are they much too light for the bore of the matter. These good fellows will bring thee where I am. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern hold their course for England : of them I have much to tell thee. Farewell.

" He that thou knowest thine, HAMLET."

Come, I will make you way for these your letters ; 30
 And do't the speedier, that you may direct me
 To him from whom you brought them. [Exeunt.

SCENE VII. Another room in the castle. Enter KING and LAERTES.

King. Now must your conscience my acquittance seal, explanation
 And you must put me in your heart for friend,
Sith you have heard, and with a knowing ear,
 That he which hath your noble father slain
Pursued my life.

Laer. It well appears : but tell me
Why you proceeded not against these feats,
So crimeful and so capital in nature,
As by your safety, wisdom, all things else,
You mainly were stirr'd up.

King. O, for two special reasons ;
 Which may to you, perhaps, seem much unsinew'd, 10
 But yet to me they are strong. The queen his mother
Lives almost by his looks ; and for myself—
My virtue or my plague, be it either which—
She's so conjunctive to my life and soul,
That, as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her. The other motive,
Why to a public count I might not go,
Is the great love the general gender bear him ; he of
Who, dipping all his faults in their affection, Co
Would, like the spring that turneth wood to stone, 20
Convert his gyves to graces ; so that my arrows
Toq slightly timber'd for so loud a wind,
Would have reverted to my bow again,
And not where I had aim'd them.

Laer. And so have I a noble father lost ;
 A sister driven into desperate terms, ~
Whose worth, if praises may go back again,
Stood challenger on mount of all the age
For her perfections : but my revenge will come.

King. Break not your sleeps for that : you must not think 30

That we are made of stuff so flat and dull
 That we can let our beard be shook with danger
 And think it pastime. You shortly shall hear more :
 I loved your father, and we love ourself ;
 And that, I hope, will teach you to imagine—

Enter a Messenger.

How now ! what news ?

Mess. Letters, my lord, from Hamlet
 This to your majesty : this to the queen.

King. From Hamlet ! who brought them ?

Mess. Sailors, my lord, they say ; I saw them not :
 They were given me by Claudio ; he received them 40
 Of him that brought them.

King. Laertes, you shall hear them.
 Leave us. [Exit Messenger.]

[Reads] “ High and mighty, You shall know I am set naked on your kingdom. To-morrow shall I beg leave to see your kingly eyes : when I shall, first asking your pardon thereunto, recount the occasion of my sudden and more strange return.

“ HAMLET.”

What should this mean ? Are all the rest come back ?
 Or is it some abuse, and no such thing ? 50

† Laer. Know you the hand ?

King. 'Tis Hamlet's character. “ Naked ! ”
 And in a postscript here, he says “ alone.”

Can you advise me?

Laer. I'm lost in it, my lord. But let him come ;
It warms the very sickness in my heart,
That I shall live and tell him to his teeth,
" Thus didest thou."

King. If it be so, Laertes—
As how should it be so? how otherwise?—
Will you be ruled by me?

Laer. Ay, my lord ;
So you will not o'errule me to a peace. 60

King. To thine own peace. If he be now return'd,
As checking at his voyage, and that he means
No more to undertake it, I will work him
To an exploit, now ripe in my device,
Under the which he shall not choose but fall :
And for his death no wind of blame shall breathe,
But even his mother shall uncharge the practice
And call it accident.

Laer. My lord, I will be ruled ;
The rather, if you could devise it so
That I might be the organ. which one

King. It falls right. 70
You have been talk'd of since your travel much,
And that in Hamlet's hearing, for a quality
Wherein, they say, you shine : your sum of parts
Did not together pluck such envy from him
As did that one, and that, in my regard,
Of the unworthiest siege. mark

Laer. trifle What part is that, my lord ?
King. A very riband in the cap of youth, am
Yet needful too ; for youth no less becomes
The light and careless livery that it wears
Than settled age his sables and his weeds, 80
Importing health and graveness. Two months since,

Here was a gentleman of Normandy :—
 I've seen myself, and served against, the French,
 And they can well on horseback : but this gallant
 Had witchcraft in't ; he grew unto his seat ;
 And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,
 As had he been incorpsed and demi-natured
 With the brave beast : so far he topp'd my thought,
 That I, in forgery of shapes and tricks,
 Came short of what he did.

Laer. A Norman was't ? 90

King. A Norman.

Laer. Upon my life, Lamond. name of W. Norman

King. The very same.

Laer. I know him well : he is the brooch indeed
 And gem of all the nation.

King. He made confession of you,
 And gave you such a masterly report
 For art and exercise in your defence,
 And for your rapier most especially,
 That he cried out, 'twould be a sight indeed,
If one could match you : the scrimers of their nation,
He swore, had neither motion, guard, nor eye, 101
If you opposed them. Sir, this report of his
Did Hamlet so envenom with his envy
That he could nothing do but wish and beg
Your sudden coming o'er, to play with him.
Now, out of this,—

Laer. What out of this, my lord ?

King. Laertes, was your father dear to you ?
 Or are you like the painting of a sorrow,
 A face without a heart ?

Laer. Why ask you this ?

King. Not that I think you did not love your father ;
 But that I know love is begun by time ; 111

And that I see, in passages of proof,
Time qualifies the spark and fire of it.
There lives within the very flame of love
A kind of wick or snuff that will abate it ;
And nothing is at a like goodness still ;
For goodness, growing to a plurisy, Snuff
Dies in his own too much : that we would do,
We should do when we would ; for this " would " changes

And hath abatements and delays as many 120
As there are tongues, are hands, are accidents ; fat
And then this " should " is like a spendthrift sigh, he
That hurts by easing. But, to the quick o' the ulcer :—
Hamlet comes back : what would you undertake,
To show yourself your father's son in deed
More than in words ? Sanctuary

Laer. To cut his throat i' the church.
King. No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize ;
Revenge should have no bounds. But, good Laertes,
Will you do this, keep close within your chamber ?
Hamlet return'd shall know you are come home : 130
We'll put on those shall praise your excellence
And set a double varnish on the fame

The Frenchman gave you, bring you in fine together
And wager on your heads : he, being remiss, Candor
Most generous and free from all contriving,
Will not peruse the foils ; so that, with ease,
Or with a little shuffling, you may choose
A sword unbated, and in a pass of practice
Requite him for your father.

Laer. I will do't :
And, for that purpose, I'll anoint my sword.
I bought an unction of a mountebank, quack doctor 140
So mortal that, but dip a knife in it,

Where it draws blood no cataplasm so rare,
 Collected from all simples that have virtue
 Under the moon, can save the thing from death
 That is but scratch'd withal : I'll touch my point
 With this contagion, that, if I gall him slightly,
 It may be death. poison bite

King. Let's further think of this ;
 Weigh what convenience both of time and means
 May fit us to our shape : if this should fail, 150
 And that our drift look through our bad performance,
 'Twere better not assay'd : therefore this project
 Should have a Reserve back or second, that might hold,
 If this should blast in proof. Soft ! let me see :
 We'll make a solemn wager on your cunnings :
 I ha't :

When in your motion you are hot and dry—
 As make your bouts more violent to that end—
 And that he calls for drink, I'll have prepared him
 A chalice for the nonce, whereon but sipping, 160
 If he by chance escape your venom'd stuck,
 Our purpose may hold there. Poisoned

up for the occasion Enter QUEEN. How now, sweet queen !

Queen. One woe doth tread upon another's heel,
 So fast they follow : your sister's drown'd, Laertes.

Laer. Drown'd ! O, where ? tree

Queen. There is a willow grows aslant a brook,
 That shows his hoar leaves in the glassy stream ;
 There with fantastic garlands did she come ma
 Of crow-flowers, nettles, daisies, and long purples.
 There, on the pendent boughs her coronet weeds 170
 Clambering to hang, an envious sliver broke ;
 When down her weedy trophies and herself

Fell in the weeping brook. Her clothes spread wide ;
And, mermaid-like, awhile they bore her up :
Which time she chanted snatches of old tunes ;
As one incapable of her own distress,
Or like a creature native and indued
Unto that element : but long it could not be Till that her garments, heavy with their drink,
Pull'd the poor wretch from her melodious lay 180
To muddy death.

Laer. Alas, then, she is drown'd ?

Queen. Drown'd, drown'd.

Laer. Too much of water hast thou, poor Ophelia,
And therefore I forbid my tears : but yet
It is our trick ; nature her custom holds,
Let shame say what it will : when these are gone,
The woman will be out. Adieu, my lord :
I have a speech of fire, that fain would blaze,
But that this folly douts it. [Exit.

King. ^{stars} Let's follow, Gertrude :
How much I had to do to calm his rage ! 190
Now fear I this will give it start again ;
Therefore let's follow. [Exeunt.

ACT V

SCENE I. A churchyard. Enter two Clowns, with spades, &c.

First Clo. Is she to be buried in Christian burial that wilfully seeks her own salvation?

Sec. Clo. I tell thee she is : and therefore make her grave straight : the crowner hath sat on her, and finds it Christian burial. at once

First Clo. How can that be, unless she drowned herself in her own defence?

Sec. Clo. Why, 'tis found so. a blunder

First Clo. It must be "se offendendo;" it cannot be else. For here lies the point : if I drown myself wittingly, it argues an act : and an act hath three branches ; it is, to act, to do, and to perform : argal there she drowned herself wittingly. 13

Sec. Clo. Nay, but hear you, goodman delyer, — digging

First Clo. Give me leave. Here lies the water ; good : here stands the man ; good : if the man go to this water, and drown himself, it is, will he, nill he, he goes,—mark you that ; but if the water come to him and drown him, he drowns not himself : argal, he that is not guilty of his own death shortens not his own life.

Sec. Clo. But is this law? 21

First Clo. Ay, marry, is't ; crowner's quest law. quest

Sec. Clo. Will you ha' the truth on't? If this had not been a gentlewoman, she should have been buried out o' Christian burial.

First Clo. Why, there thou say'st : and the more pity that great folk should have countenance in this world to drown or hang themselves, more than their even Christian. Come, my spade. There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners, ditchers, and grave-makers : they hold up Adam's profession.

Sec. Clo. Was he a gentleman? was Adam a gentleman? ³¹

First Clo. A' was the first that ever bore arms.

Sec. Clo. Why, he had none. had he none of arms?

First Clo. What, art a heathen? How dost thou understand the Scripture? The Scripture says "Adam digged : " could he dig without arms? I'll put another question to thee : if thou answerest me not to the purpose, confess thyself—

Sec. Clo. Go to. 40

First Clo. What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

Sec. Clo. The gallows-maker ; for that frame out-lives a thousand tenants.

First Clo. I like thy wit well, in good faith : the gallows does well ; but how does it well ? it does well to those that do ill ; now thou dost ill to say the gallows is built stronger than the church : argal, the gallows may do well to thee. To't again, come.

Sec. Clo. " Who builds stronger than a mason, a shipwright, or a carpenter ? " 51

First Clo. Ay, tell me that, and unyoke. cease work

Sec. Clo. Marry, now I can tell.

First Clo. To't.

Sec. Clo. Mass, I cannot tell.

Enter HAMLET and HORATIO, at a distance.

First Clo. Cudgel thy brains no more about it, for your dull ass/will not mend his pace with beating ;

and, when you are asked this question next, say "a grave-maker:" the houses that he makes last till doomsday. Go, get thee to Yaughan: fetch me a stoup of liquor.

finger laven keeps [Exit Sec. Clown.
[He digs, and sings.

In youth, when I did love, did love, 62

Methought it was very sweet,

To contract, O, the time, for, ah, my behove,

O, methought, there was nothing meet.

Ham. Has this fellow no feeling of his business, that he sings at grave-making?

Hor. Custom hath made it in him a property of easiness.

Ham. 'Tis e'en so: the hand of little employment hath the daintier sense. 71

First Clo. [Sings] h

But age, with his stealing steps,

Hath claw'd me in his clutch, gruf

And hath shipped me intil the land,

As if I had never been such.

Ham. That skull had a ^{skull} tongue in it, and could sing once: how the knave jowls it to the ground, as if it were Cain's jawbone, that did the first murder! It might be the pate of a politician, which this ass now o'er-reaches; one that would circumvent God, might it not?

Hor. It might, my lord. head Cain = J. 6 Schemer 81

Ham. Or of a courtier; which could say "Good morrow, sweet lord! How dost thou, good lord?" This might be my lord Such-a-one, that praised my lord Such-a-one's horse, when he meant to beg it; might it not?

Hor. Ay, my lord.

Ham. Why, e'en so : and now my lady Worm's ;
chapless, and knocked about the mazzard with a sexton's spade : here's fine revolution, an we had the trick to see't. Did these bones cost no more the breeding, but to play at loggats with 'em ? mine ache to think on't.

First Clo. [Sings]

~ game bowling

A pick-axe, and a spade, a spade,

For and a shrouding sheet :

O, a pit of clay for to be made

For such a guest is meet.

98

[Throws up another skull.]

Ham. There's another : why may not that be the skull of a lawyer ? Where be his quiddities ^{now} now, his quilllets, his cases, his tenures, and his tricks ? why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery ? Hum ! This fellow might be in's time a great buyer of land, with his statutes, his recognizances, his fines, his double vouchers, his recoveries : is this the fine of his fines, and the recovery of his recoveries, to have his fine ^{here} pate full of fine dirt ?
will his vouchers vouch him no more of his purchases, and double ones too, than the length and breadth of a pair of indentures ? The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box ; and must the inheritor himself have no more, ha ?

Hor. Not a jot more, my lord.

» Ham. Is not parchment made of sheep-skins ?

Hor. Ay, my lord, and of calf-skins too.

Ham. They are sheep and calves which seek out assurance in that. I will speak to this fellow. Whose grave's this, sirrah ?

First Clo. Mine, sir.

120

[Sings] O, a pit of clay for to be made
For such a guest is meet.

Ham. I think it be thine, indeed ; for thou liest in't.

First Clo. You lie out on't, sir, and therefore it is not yours : for my part, I do not lie in't, and yet it is mine.

Ham. Thou dost lie in't, to be in't and say it is thine : 'tis for the dead, not for the quick ; therefore thou liest.

First Clo. 'Tis a quick lie, sir ; 'twill away again, from me to you. 131

Ham. What man dost thou dig it for ?

First Clo. For no man, sir.

Ham. What woman, then ?

First Clo. For none, neither.

Ham. Who's to be buried in't ?

First Clo. One that was a woman, sir ; but, rest her soul, she's dead.

Ham. How absolute the knave is ! we must speak by the card, or equivocation will undo us. By the Lord, Horatio, these three years I have taken note of it ; the age is grown so picked that the toe of the peasant comes so near the heel of the courtier, he galls his kibe. How long hast thou been a grave-maker ?

First Clo. Of all the days i' the year, I come to't that day that our last king Hamlet overcame Fortinbras.

Ham. How long is that since ?

First Clo. Cannot you tell that ? every fool can tell that : it was the very day that young Hamlet was born ; he that is mad, and sent into England. 150

Ham. Ay, marry, why was he sent into England ?

First Clo. Why, because he was mad : he shall recover his wits there ; or, if he do not, it's no great matter there.

Queen. O my son, what theme ?

Ham. I loved Ophelia : forty thousand brothers
Could not, with all their quantity of love,
Make up my sum. What wilt thou do for her ?

King. O, he is mad, Laertes.

Queen. For love of God, forbear him.

Ham. 'Swords, show me what thou'lt do :
 Woo't weep ? woo't fight ? woo't fast ? woo't tear thyself ?

Woo't drink up eisel ? eat a crocodile ?

I'll do't. Dost thou come here to whine ? 280

To outface me with leaping in her grave ?

Be buried quick with her, and so will I :

And, if thou prate of mountains, let them throw

Millions of acres on us, till our ground,

Singeing his ^{lean} pate against the burning zone, ^{sun}

Make Ossa like a wart ! Nay, an thou'lt mouth,

I'll rant as well as thou.

Queen.

This is mere madness :

And thus awhile the fit will work on him ;

Anon, as patient as the female dove,

When that her golden couplets are disclosed, 290

His silence will sit drooping, ^{golden} ^{hair} ^{beaten}

Ham.

Hear you, sir ;

What is the reason that you use me thus ?

I loved you ever : but it is no matter ;

Let Hercules himself do what he may,

The cat will mew and dog will have his day. [Exit.

King. I pray you, good Horatio, wait upon him.

[Exit Horatio.

[To Laertes] Strengthen your patience in our last night's speech ;

We'll put the matter to the present push.

Good Gertrude, set some watch over your son.

This grave shall have a living monument : 300
 An hour of quiet shortly shall we see ;
 Till then, in patience our proceeding be. [Exeunt.

SCENE II. A hall in the castle. Enter HAMLET

and HORATIO.

enact incidents how Hamlet esc

Ham. So much for this, sir : now shall you see the other :

You do remember all the circumstance ? wreck

Hor. Remember it, my lord !

Ham. Sir, in my heart there was a kind of fighting,
 That would not let me sleep : methought I lay
 Worse than the mutines in the bilboes. Rashly,—
 And praised be rashness for it,—let us know,
 Our indiscretion sometimes serves us well,
When our deep plots do fail : and that should teach us
There's a divinity that shapes our ends, 10
 Rough-hew them how we will,—

Hor. That is most certain.

Ham. Up from my cabin,
 My sea-gown scarf'd about me, in the dark
 Groped I to find out them ; had my desire,
 Finger'd their packet, and in fine withdrew
 To mine own room again ; making so bold,
 My fears forgetting manners, to unseal
Their grand commission ; where I found, Horatio,—
 O royal knavery !—an exact command,
Larded with many several sorts of reasons 20
Importing Denmark's health and England's too,
 With, ho ! such bug and goblins in my life,
 That, on the supervise, no leisure bated, with a
 No, not to stay the grinding of the axe,
 My head should be struck off.

Hor. ^{or dy} Is't possible ?

Ham. Here's the commission : read it at more leisure.

But wilt thou hear me how I did proceed ?

Hor. I beseech you. ^{earnest}

Ham. Being thus be-netted round with villanies,—
Ere I could make a prologue to my brains, 30
They had begun the play—I sat me down,
Devised a new commission, wrote it fair ;
I once did hold it, as our statists do, ^{statemen}
A baseness to write fair and labour'd much
How to forget that learning, but, sir, now
It did me yeoman's service : wilt thou know
The effect of what I wrote ?

Hor. Ay, good my lord.

Ham. An earnest conjuration from the king,
As England was his faithful tributary,
As love between them like the palm might flourish, 40
As peace should still her wheaten garland wear
And stand a comma ^{link} 'tween their families, ^{friendship} wheat
And many such-like " As "es of great charge, ^{of peace}
That, on the view and knowing of these contents,
Without debatement further, more or less,
He should the bearers put to sudden death,
Not shriving-time allow'd.

Hor. How was this seal'd ?

Ham. Why, even in that was heaven ordinant.
I had my father's signet in my purse,
Which was the model of that Danish seal ; 50
Folded the writ up in form of the other,
Subscribed it, gave't the impression, placed it safely,
The changeling never known. Now, the next day
Was our sea-fight ; and what to this was sequent
Thou know'st already.

Spys-

Hor. So Guildenstern and Rosencrantz go to't.

Ham. Why, man, they did make love to this employment ;

They are not near my conscience ; their defeat
Does by their own insinuation grow : cowards

'Tis dangerous when the baser nature comes 60
Between the pass and fell incensed points
Of mighty opposites. opponents

Hor. Why, what a king is this !

Ham. Does it not, thinks't thee, stand me now upon—

He that hath kill'd my king and whored my mother,
Popp'd in between the election and my hopes,
Thrown out his angle not to be for my proper life,
And with such cozenage—is't not perfect conscience,
To quit him with this arm ? and is't not to be damn'd,
To let this canker of our nature come
In further evil ? 70

Hor. It must be shortly known to him from England
What is the issue of the business there.

Ham. It will be short : the interim is mine ;
And a man's life's no more than to say " One."

But I am very sorry, good Horatio,
That to Laertes I forgot myself ; Comm
For, by the image of my cause, I see
The portraiture of his : I'll court his favours : appeal of
But, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me
Into a towering passion.

Hor. Peace ! who comes here ? 80

Enter OSRIC. fop (fashioned)

Os. Your lordship is right welcome back to Denmark.

Ham. I humbly thank you, sir. Dost know this water-fly?

Hor. No my good lord.

Ham. Thy state is the more gracious ; for 'tis a vice to know him. He hath much land, and fertile : let a beast be lord of beasts, and his crib shall stand at the king's mess : ^{dust of meat} 'tis a chough ; but, ^{far} as I say, spacious in the possession of dirt. Jackdaw manage 90

Osr. Sweet lord, if your lordship were at leisure, I should impart a thing to you from his majesty.

Ham. I will receive it, sir, with all diligence of spirit. Put your bonnet to his right use ; 'tis for the head.

Osr. I thank your lordship, it is very hot.

Ham. No, believe me, 'tis very cold ; the wind is northerly.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed.

Ham. But yet methinks it is very sultry and hot for my complexion. 100

Osr. Exceedingly, my lord ; it is very sultry,—as 'twere,—I cannot tell how. But, my lord, his majesty bade me signify to you that he has laid a great wager on your head : sir, this is the matter,—

Ham. I beseech you, remember—

[Hamlet moves him to put on his hat.]

Osr. Nay, good my lord ; for mine ease, in good faith. Sir, here is newly come to court Laertes ; believe me, an absolute gentleman, full of most excellent differences, of very soft society and great showing : indeed, to speak feelingly of him, he is the card or calendar of gentry, for you shall find in him the continent of what a gentleman would see. far 112

Ham. Sir, his definement suffers no perdition in you ; though, I know, to divide him inventorially would dizzy the arithmetic of memory, and yet but

^{man} ~~yaw~~ neither, in respect of his quick sail. But, in the verity of extolment, I take him to be a soul of great article ; and his infusion of such ^{valour} ~~dear~~th and rareness, as, to make true diction of him, his semblable is his mirror ; and who else would trace him, ^{Satillan} ~~his~~ umbrage, nothing more. 121

Osr. Your lordship speaks most infallibly of him.

Ham. The ^{meaning} ~~concernancy~~, sir ? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath ?

Osr. Sir ? ^{inf...}

Hor. Is't not possible to understand in another tongue ? You will do't, sir, really.

Ham. What imports the nomination of this gentleman ?

Osr. Of Laertes ?

130

Hor. His purse is empty already ; all's golden words are spent.

Ham. Of him, sir.

Osr. I know you are not ignorant—

Ham. I would you did, sir ; yet, in faith, if you did, it would not much approve me. Well, sir ?

Osr. You are not ignorant of what excellence Laertes is—

Ham. I dare not confess that, lest I should compare with him in excellence ; but, to know a man well, were to know himself. 141

Osr. I mean, sir, for his weapon ; but in the imputation laid on him by them, in his meed he's unfellowed.

Ham. What's his weapon ? ^{Courage}

Osr. Rapier and dagger.

Ham. That's two of his weapons : but, well.

Osr. The king, sir, hath wagered with him six Barbary horses : against the which he has imponed, as I take it, six French rapiers and poniards, with their assigns, as girdle, hangers, and so : three of the carriages, in faith, are very dear to fancy, very responsive to the hilts, most delicate carriages, and of very liberal conceit. 153

Ham. What call you the carriages ?

Hor. I knew you must be edified by the margent ere you had done.

Osr. The carriages, sir, are the hangers.

Ham. The phrase would be more german to the matter, if we could carry cannon by our sides : I would it might be hangers till then. But, on : six Barbary horses against six French swords, their assigns, and three liberal-conceited carriages ; that's the French bet against the Danish. Why is this "imponed," as you call it ? 164

Osr. The king, sir, hath laid, that in a dozen passes between yourself and him, he shall not exceed you three hits : he hath laid on twelve for nine ; and it would come to immediate trial, if your lordship would vouchsafe the answer.

Ham. How if I answer "no" ? 170

Osr. I mean, my lord, the opposition of your person in trial.

Ham. Sir, I will walk here in the hall : if it please his majesty, 'tis the breathing time of day with me ; let the foils be brought, the gentleman willing, and the king hold his purpose, I will win for him an I can ; if not, I will gain nothing but my shame and the odd hits.

Osr. Shall I re-deliver you e'en so ?

Ham. To this effect, sir ; after what flourish your nature will. 181

Osr. I commend my duty to your lordship.

Ham. Yours, yours. [Exit Osr.] He does well to commend it himself ; there are no tongues else for's turn.

Hor. This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head.

Ham. He did comply with his dug, before he sucked it. Thus has he—and many more of the same beyy that I know the drossy age dotes on—only got the tune of the time and outward habit of encounter ; a kind of yesty collection, which carries them through and through the most fanned and winnowed opinions ; and do but blow them to their trial, the bubbles are out.

195

Enter a Lord.

Lord. My lord, his majesty commended him to you by young Osric, who brings back to him, that you attend him in the hall : he sends to know if your pleasure hold to play with Laertes, or that you will take longer time.

200

Ham. I am constant to my purposes ; they follow the king's pleasure : if his fitness speaks, mine is ready ; now or whensoever, provided I be so able as now.

Lord. The king and queen and all are coming down.

Ham. In happy time.

Lord. The queen desires you to use some gentle entertainment to Laertes before you fall to play.

Ham. She well instructs me. [Exit Lord.]

Hor. You will lose this wager, my lord. 209

Ham. I do not think so ; since he went into France, I have been in continual practice ; I shall win at the odds. But thou wouldst not think how ill all's here about my heart : but it is no matter.

Hor. Nay, good my lord,—

Ham. It is but foolery ; but it is such a kind of gain-giving, as would perhaps trouble a woman.

Hor. If your mind dislike any thing, obey it : I will forestal their repair hither, and say you are not fit.

Ham. (Not a whit, we defy augury : there's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow. If it be now, 'tis not to come ; if it be not to come, it will be now ; if it be not now, yet it will come : the readiness is all : since no man has aught of what he leaves, what is't to leave betimes :)

224

Enter KING, QUEEN, LAERTES, Lords, OSRIC, and Attendants with foils, &c.

King. Come, Hamlet, come, and take this hand from me.

[The King puts Laertes' hand into Hamlet's.]

Ham. Give me your pardon, sir : I've done you wrong ;

But pardon't, as you are a gentleman.

This presence knows,

And you must needs have heard, how I am punish'd
With sore distraction. What I have done, 230

That might your nature, honour and exception all - full
Roughly awake, I here proclaim was madness.

Was't Hamlet wrong'd Laertes ? Never Hamlet :

If Hamlet from himself be ta'en away,

And when he's not himself does wrong Laertes,

Then Hamlet does it not, Hamlet denies it.

Who does it, then ? His madness : if't be so,

Hamlet is of the faction that is wrong'd ;

His madness is poor Hamlet's enemy.

Sir, in this audience,

240

Let my disclaiming from a purposed evil

Free me so far in your most generous thoughts,

That I have shot mine arrow o'er the house,
And hurt my brother.

Laer. I am satisfied in nature,^{o.}
Whose motive, in this case, should stir me most
To my revenge : but in my terms of honour
I stand aloof ; and will no reconciliation,
Till by some elder ^{authority} masters, of known honour,
I have a voice and precedent of peace,
To keep my name ungored. But till that time, 250
I do receive your offer'd love like love,
And will not wrong it.

Ham. I embrace it freely ;
And will this brother's wager frankly play.
Give us the foils. Come on.

Laer. Come, one for me.

Ham. I'll be your foil, Laertes : in mine ignorance
Your skill shall, like a star i' the darkest night,
Stick fiery off indeed. ^{shine out}

Laer. You mock me, sir.

Ham. No, by this hand.

King. Give them the foils, young Osric. Cousin
Hamlet,
You know the wager ?

Ham. Very well, my lord ; 260
Your grace hath laid the odds o' the weaker side.

King. I do not fear it ; I have seen you both :
But since he is better'd, we have therefore odds.

Laer. This is too heavy, let me see another.

Ham. This likes me well. These foils have all a length ?

[They prepare to play.]

Osr. Ay, my good lord. ^{Amis}

King. Set me the stoups of wine upon that table.
If Hamlet give the first or second hit,

Or quit in answer of the third exchange,
 Let all the battlements their ordnance fire ; 270
 The king shall drink to Hamlet's better breath ;
 And in the cup an union shall he throw,
 Richer than that which four successive kings
 In Denmark's crown have worn. Give me the cups ;
 And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
 The trumpet to the cannoneer without,
 The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,
 " Now the king drinks to Hamlet." Come, begin :
 And you, the judges, bear a wary eye.

Ham. Come on, sir. Caution

Laer. Come, my lord. [They play.]

Ham. One.

Laer. No.

Ham. Judgement.

Osr. A hit, a very palpable hit.

Laer. Well ; again. 281

King. Stay ; give me drink. Hamlet, this pearl is thine ;

Here's to thy health.

[Trumpets sound, and cannon shot off within.]

Give him the cup.

Ham. I'll play this bout first ; set it by awhile.

Come. [They play.] Another hit ; what say you ?

Laer. A touch, a touch, I do confess.

King. Our son shall win. does not breathe A m

Queen. He's fat, and scant of breath.

Here, Hamlet, take my napkin, rub thy brows :

The queen carouses to thy fortune, Hamlet.

Ham. Good madam !

King. Gertrude, do not drink. 290

Queen. I will, my lord ; I pray you, pardon me.

King. [Aside] It is the poison'd cup : it is too late.

Ham. I dare not drink yet, madam ; by and by.

Queen. Come, let me wipe thy face.

Laer. My lord, I'll hit him now.

King. I do not think't.

Laer. [Aside] And yet 'tis almost 'gainst my conscience.

Ham. Come, for the third, Laertes : you but dally ;
I pray you, pass with your best violence ;

I am afeard you make a wanton of me ^{breath'g me too}

Laer. Say you so ? come on. [They play.]

Osr. Nothing, neither way. 301

Laer. Have at you now !

[Laertes wounds Hamlet ; then, in scuffling, they change rapiers, and Hamlet wounds Laertes.]

King. ^{daggers} Part them ; they are incensed.

Ham. Nay, come, again. [The Queen falls.]

Osr. Look to the queen there, ho !

Hor. They bleed on both sides. How is it, my lord ?

Osr. How is't, Laertes ?

Laer. Why, as a woodcock to mine own ^{deceits} springe, Osrice ;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

Ham. How does the queen ?

King. She swoonds to see them bleed.

Queen. No, no, the drink, the drink,—O my dear Hamlet,—

The drink, the drink ! I am poison'd. [Dies.]

Ham. O villany ! Ho ! let the door be lock'd :
Treachery ! Seek it out. 312

Laer. It is here, Hamlet : Hamlet, thou art slain ;
No medicine in the world can do thee good ;
In thee there is not half an hour of life ;
The treacherous instrument is in thy hand,

Unbated and envenom'd : the foul practice
 Hath turn'd itself on me ; lo, here I lie,
 Never to rise again : thy mother's poison'd :
 I can no more : the king, the king's to blame. 320

Ham. The point envenom'd too !

Then, venom, to thy work. [Stabs the King.

All. Treason ! treason !

King. O, yet defend me, friends ; I am but hurt.

Ham. Here, thou incestuous, murderous, damned

Dane, ^{drink} Drink off this potion. ^{pearl} Is thy union here ?
 Follow my mother. [King dies.

Laer. He is justly served ;
 It is a poison ^{made} temper'd by himself.
Exchange forgiveness with me, noble Hamlet :
Mine and my father's death come not upon thee, 330
Nor thine on me ! [Dies.

Ham. Heaven make thee free of it ! I follow thee.
I am dead, Horatio. Wretched queen, adieu !
You that look pale and tremble at this chance,
 That are but mutes or audience to this act,
 Had I but time—as this fell sergeant, death,
 Is strict in his arrest—O, I could tell you—
 But let it be. Horatio, I am dead ;
 Thou livest ; report me and my cause aright
 To the unsatisfied.

Hor. Never believe it : 340
 I am more an antique Roman than a Dane :
 Here's yet some liquor left.

Ham. As thou'rt a man,
 Give me the cup : let go ; by heaven, I'll have't.
 O good Horatio, what a wounded name,
 Things standing thus unknown, shall live behind me !
 If thou didst ever hold me in thy heart,

Absent thee from felicity awhile,
And in this harsh world draw thy breath in pain,
To tell my story. [March afar off, and shot within.

What warlike noise is this ?

Osr. Young Fortinbras, with conquest come from Poland, 350

To the ambassadors of England gives
 This warlike volley.

Ham. O, I die, Horatio ;
 The potent poison quite o'er-crows my spirit :
 I cannot live to hear the news from England ;
 But I do prophesy the election lights succesive
 On Fortinbras : he has my dying voice ;
 So tell him, with the occurrents, more and less,
 Which have solicited. The rest is silence. [Dies.

Hor. Now cracks a noble heart. Good night, sweet prince ;
 And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest ! 360
 Why does the drum come hither ? [March within.

Enter FORTINBRAS, the English Ambassadors, and others.

Fort. Where is this sight ?

Hor. What is it ye would see ?
 If aught of woe or wonder, cease your search.

Fort. This quarry cries on havoc. O proud death,
 What feast is toward in thine eternal cell,
 That thou so many princes at a shot
 So bloodily hast struck ?

First Amb. The sight is dismal ;
 And our affairs from England come too late :
 The ears are senseless that should give us hearing,
 To tell him his commandment is fulfill'd, 370

That Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are dead :
Where should we have our thanks ?

Hor. Not from his mouth,
Had it the ability of life to thank you :
He never gave commandment for their death.
But since, so jump upon this bloody question,
You from the Polack wars, and you from England,
Are here arrived, give order that these bodies
High on a stage be placed to the view ;
And let me speak to the yet unknowing world
How these things came about : so shall you hear 380
Of carnal, bloody, and unnatural acts,
Of accidental judgements, casual slaughters,
Of deaths put on by cunning and forced cause,
And, in this upshot, purposes mistook,
Fall'n on the inventors' heads : all this can I Truly deliver.

Fort. Let us haste to hear it,
And call the noblest to the audience.
For me, with sorrow I embrace my fortune :
I have some rights of memory in this kingdom,
Which now to claim my vantage doth invite me. 390

Hor. Of that I shall have also cause to speak,
And from his mouth whose voice will draw on more :
But let this same be presently perform'd,
Even while men's minds are wild ; lest more mis-chance,
On plots and errors, happen.

Fort. Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage ;
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have proved most royally : and, for his passage,
The soldiers' music and the rites of war 400
Speak loudly for him.

Take up the bodies : such a sight as this Becomes the field, but here shows much amiss.
Go, bid the soldiers shoot.

*[A dead march. Exeunt, bearing off the dead bodies ;
after which a peal of ordnance is shot off.]*

Hamlet is burlesquing Osric's affected way of talking :—His description suffers nothing at your hands, though I know to make a full list of all his good qualities would be too much for anyone's memory, and such a full description would move slowly in comparison with the speed with which thoughts of his accomplishments rush into the mind. But to praise him strictly according to his merits, I take him to be a splendid fellow, and his merits so exceedingly rare that the like of him could only be seen in his mirror. And anyone trying to imitate him would be nothing but a shadow of him.

APPENDIX

1. THE LIFE OF SHAKESPEARE

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE was born in 1564 at Stratford-on-Avon. His father, one of the leading citizens of the town, was a glover who also traded in agricultural produce and possibly did some farming. It is assumed that he gave his son the ordinary education of a boy of his class at the local grammar school. Nothing is definitely known of the early life of the dramatist, however, until his marriage at the age of eighteen to Anne Hathaway, a woman some eight years older than himself. About 1584 he left Stratford and came to London. Here he must soon have joined a company of players, but there is no record of his activities until 1592, in which year it appears from a satirical comment made on him by Robert Greene that he was becoming well known as a playwright. His first published work, the poem Venus and Adonis, appeared in 1593; it was followed by Lucrece in the next year. Both these poems were dedicated to the Earl of Southampton. We next hear of him as a member of the Lord Chamberlain's Company of actors (who became "the King's men" after James's accession), and he probably remained in association with them for the rest of his working life. From 1599 the company occupied the Globe Theatre on the Bankside in Southwark. As an actor Shakespeare is said to have taken the parts of Adam in As You Like It and the Ghost in Hamlet. As a playwright he was the mainstay of the company; for about fifteen years he provided them on the average with two plays a year. His growing prosperity was indicated by his purchase, in 1597, of New Place, one of the largest houses in Stratford. About 1610 he left London and went to live as a retired gentleman at his Stratford home. He died there in 1616.

2. THE ORDER OF THE PLAYS

In the collected edition of Shakespeare's plays published in 1623 no indication was given of the dates when they were first produced. Even in the case of the previously issued Quartos of some of the separate plays the dates on the title-pages are not to be taken as those of the earliest productions. The dating of Shakespeare's works is therefore a matter for conjecture based on such indirect evidence as is available. The following list gives an order which would be generally accepted :—

1590–1596

Henry VI, Pts. I, II, and III
Richard III
Comedy of Errors
Titus Andronicus
Taming of the Shrew
Two Gentlemen of Verona
Love's Labour's Lost
Romeo and Juliet
Richard II
Midsummer Night's Dream

1596–1600

King John
Merchant of Venice
Henry IV, Pts. I and II
Much Ado About Nothing
Henry V
Julius Caesar
Merry Wives of Windsor
As You Like It
Twelfth Night

1600–1608

Hamlet
Troilus and Cressida
All's Well that Ends Well
Measure for Measure
Othello

APPENDIX

Macbeth
King Lear
Antony and Cleopatra
Coriolanus
Timon of Athens

1608-1613

Pericles
Cymbeline
Winter's Tale
Tempest
Henry VIII
Two Noble Kinsmen

3. THE ELIZABETHAN THEATRE

Shakespeare's plays were originally acted under conditions very different from those of to-day. Playhouses were new institutions—the first of them had been built in Shoreditch in 1576—and the technique of play-production was in its infancy. Moreover, as the first theatres were by no means like those we know in plan and construction, the dramatists necessarily employed methods that would seem strange to their present-day successors.

In general form the public theatres of Shakespeare's time resembled the galleried inn-yards in which companies of actors had previously set up a temporary stage for their performances. The stage was a rectangular platform projecting into the "yard," which was open to the sky. There were no seats on the floor around the stage: the "groundlings" stood and enclosed the actors on three sides. More expensive accommodation was provided in tiers of galleries running right round the building. The topmost gallery had a thatched roof. Fashionable young gallants were allowed seats on the stage itself. The plays were performed in daylight, usually in the afternoon. There were some differences between the "public" and the "private" theatres: the private theatres, like the Blackfriars, were roofed, used artificial light, and were attended by a better-class audience. No painted scenery was used; but some indication of the place represented might be given by such movable properties as a bed or a single small tree symbolising a wood. The stage itself was sheltered by a roof. In the floor there was a trap-door through which ghosts and apparitions rose and descended. This is the explanation of the stage direction "Descends" in connection with the apparitions in Macbeth, IV. 1. The main stage could not, of course, be curtained off.

At the back of the platform were two doors through which the actors entered. In the space between these doors was hung a curtain which, when drawn, revealed an inner stage. In this recess Ferdinand and Miranda would have been shown playing their game of chess, and the play-scene in Hamlet would have been performed. It could serve also for Lear's hovel, Prospero's cell, or the tomb of the Capulets.

Above the inner stage was a balcony forming part of the lowest gallery running round the house. This upper space could be used for the sleeping-rooms of Macbeth's castle, for Juliet's balcony, or the room in Shylock's house from which Jessica throws down the casket to Lorenzo. The stage direction "Enter Above" frequently found in the old texts means that the actors are to come on to this gallery.

The De Witt drawing of the Swan Theatre, here reproduced, is the only clear contemporary pictorial evidence of what one of the Elizabethan playhouses looked like. Even this is probably incorrect in some of the details. The original rough sketch of the theatre made by John de Witt for his Observationes Londinenses is lost, but a copy of it made by Arend van Buchell of Utrecht survives.

With regard to the actors who performed on the Elizabethan stage, all that need be said is that they included no women in their companies. Female parts were played by boys. At one time a company consisting entirely of boys—members of the choir of the Chapel Royal—was very popular.

The peculiar conditions of the Elizabethan theatre must be taken into account when we are examining Shakespeare's stage-craft. They explain, for instance, the frequent change of scene which is a characteristic of the plays of the time. The audiences did not demand realism: they were prepared to use their imagination and accept the simplest symbolism as a means of suggesting the place of action. The extreme example of Shakespeare's free treatment of place and time is seen in Antony and Cleopatra, where he has a succession of very short scenes located in a variety of widely separated places. The typical modern dramatist would not deal with his material in this way. He works with the knowledge that a change in the supposed place demands a change in scenery, which takes time and may cause an undesirable break in the action. Moreover, every additional "set" required adds considerably to the expense of production. There is good reason, therefore, why a modern play should differ considerably in shape from an Elizabethan play.

The absence of scenery and lighting had other minor but interesting results. The dramatist was compelled, for example, to introduce into the dialogue indications of time and place that would now be superfluous. A famous instance occurs in Julius Caesar. In the Orchard Scene the audience is to suppose that it is night. Brutus therefore opens with the remark :—

I cannot, by the progress of the stars,
Give guess how near to day.

And throughout the scene the darkness of night is insisted on by the speakers. Similarly, the second act of Macbeth begins at night. Hence, when Banquo enters, he is preceded by a torch-bearer, and he talks about the moon and the stars. Again, the description of Macbeth's castle put into the mouth of Duncan and Banquo is introduced not merely for the sake of the lyrical touch, very welcome at this point, but in order to give the spectators information which could not be conveyed to the eye by a stage-picture of a castle.

Since the actors were playing on an open platform-stage, they had to aim at different effects of grouping from those obtained in the modern theatre, where the proscenium acts like a picture-frame entirely separating performers from spectators. Processions and dancing were freely introduced, and the elaborate costumes worn by the actors gave colour to the scene. The fact that the performers were immediately surrounded by spectators obviated to some extent the difficulty experienced nowadays in speaking the soliloquies and the asides that were a regular part of the old stage convention. There was an intimacy between players and audience that made it seem not unnatural for a character to allow his private thoughts to be overheard.

Owing to the absence of a curtain for the main stage, the dramatist had to take special measures when he required a scene to end with a definite break in the action. He had to arrange for all his characters to leave the stage. The problem was most serious at the end of the play. The final scene of Hamlet illustrates the difficulty. A modern playwright would bring down the curtain at the climax, that is, when Horatio, bending over the body of his dead friend, says :—

Good night, sweet prince,
And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest.

But, on the Elizabethan stage, if the play had ended here, the dead would have had to rise and walk off. To obviate this absurdity, Fortinbras and the English ambassadors are brought in, and the scene is prolonged for Fortinbras to say :—

Let four captains
Bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage . . .

There is a dead march, and the soldiers carry the bodies of Hamlet and the other dead off the stage.

It may be noted, finally, that the first theatres were used not only for dramatic performances but also for bear-baiting, cock-fighting, and athletic contests. The public liking for exhibitions of bodily skill to some extent influenced the fare provided by the playwrights. Shakespeare, for example, indulged his audiences with the wrestling match in As You Like It. This was a genuine contest. Similarly, the broadsword fight at the conclusion of Macbeth was a real trial of skill between combatants accustomed to their weapons.
